IS NOT LONA'S DAY.

Miss Barrison Not Allowed to Ride.

SOCIETY GETS NO SHOCK.

Judges Declare Her Costume Is Unbecoming.

HORSE SHOW A BIG SUCCESS.

Foxhall Keene Gives an Exhibition on Jumpers.

GENERAL NEWS FROM NEW YORK.

New York, Nov. 11.—[Special.]—The principal feature of the horse show tonight might have been Lona Barrison—but it wasn't. This wasn't Lona's fault, for the vaudeville performer was anxious to ride her milk white horse in a costume which she described as "Parisian, and all right in Paris, where I wore it—but."

She staggered the directors of the show, and they declined to allow Lona to enter the ring. So far as the good white horse Maestoso was concerned, it seemed a thousand pities. It was a horse which deserved a place in the best of rings. As the great white steed was led into the space just outside of the entrance gates, it attracted the attention and admiration of thousands. But the saddle on Maestoso's back had a stirrup on each side, and in that fact lay possibility of danger.

Supt. Clark, on whose broad shoulders had been placed the unhappy burden of carrying out the will of the judges, approached a female with a face so hard that it did not seem as if Maestoso's iron shod hoof could make an impression on it, and asked if she intended to ride the horse.

Abides by Judges' Decision.

"I certainly do," said she.

"Well, the judges have decided that if the horse is to be ridden by a lady it must be ridden in the fashion proper to the sex and in a costume befitting a high school exhibition," and that settled the question as nicely as the Board of Health could settle a nuisance with chloride of lime.

As for society, a part had come early in order to be shocked, another part had staid away that it might not be insulted, and there was grumbling in both camps that a sensation had been spoiled.

But Miss Barrison showed her costume on the promenade, and, in spite of her inability to appear in the ring, it was a great night at the Horse Show, made so by a great crowd and by an interesting program of horses, music, and New York society in the boxes.

Expert Opinion of the Show.

James McMeeken, a celebrated horseman who came over from Carnbooth, Scotland, to act as one of the judges of hackneys at the horse show, thinks it is a great show. He said today:

"The majority of the hackney classes were conspicuous for the nice quality of the different exhibits. The 2-year-old mares, as a lot, were decidedly good. Unfortunately, Lady Cutton, who won in the yearling class last year, was shown with as much beef on her as if she had been got up for the butcher. This proved too serious a handicap to enable her to repeat her victory. Frills, the winner, is a wee bit ragged across the hips, but in other respects is a wonderfully fine filly.

"Barthorpe Performer, the winning 3-year-old stallion, is a lovely horse, and, without detracting from the merits of his opponents, there is no denying but that he won easily. In the contest for stallions, to be shown with four of their get, Cadet, through his youngsters, had an easy win. They were as like as if they had been cast out of the same mold.

"As regards those classes in the show which were judged by other gentlemen, my admiration was very much excited over the great number of saddle and harness horses of nice quality turned into the ring at one time. Taken collectively they were a revelation. It is my opinion that if the mares in these classes were bred to hackney stallions of proper pedigree some of the finest saddle and harness horses in the world would be the result. As for the show itself, it is the finest of the kind I have ever seen."

Evening Opens with a Parade.

The evening card opened with a parade that displayed hackney and Shetland thoroughbreds and hunters while the crowd poured into the garden. The promenade was full to overflowing by the time the show was fairly under way. The boxes and seats had filled up in a way the rainy weather would scarcely have led one to suppose possible. The high school class consumed as much time as a woman can in a bonnet shop.

Next came a big and decidedly smart class of high-steppers. The judges had to resort to the weeding-out process, and three different batches got under the gate before they got down to really serious business. Some little amusement was caused by Mrs. Perry Tiffany's Fandango, which lived up to its name by doing a kind of high school act and jumping along on one foreleg, not because it was lame, but because it felt good. The blue ribbon went to Don Wilkes, the property of Louis W. Wormser.

It was a great day for the horses. They attracted more than a little attention. People looked at the pony stallions, and people showered applause on Col. Waring and his street cleaning teams that really merited medals of excellence, the most novel exhibit of the day, with the street cleaners in their white rigs.

Foxhall Keene on the Jumpers.

Foxhall Keene rode several of the jumpers in the Corinthian class and gave a splendid exhibiton of what a man can do in the cross country way. His seat was perfect, his handling of the nags superb, and he was enthusiastically cheered.

Probably the most brilliant figure in the boxes tonight was Mrs. W. E. D. Stokes. Her costume was distinctly Japanese. The effect produced by the gown was well studied and admirably carried out. It was a gown of black satin with a bolero of poppy satin. The little jacket itself was elaborately Eastern, a mere foundation for wonderful scrolls and untraceable patterns wrought in gold.

VALENTINE INDICTED FOR FRAUD.

Some of the Methods Followed in His Swindling Operations.

New York, Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Valentine, the check-forger now in Brooklyn jail, who has been telling of the operations of a gang of swindlers who he thinks may have stolen $2,000,000, was indicted today by the Kings County grand jury on four separate charges. Two of the indictments are for larceny by means of forged checks. The other two are based on his relations with May Wintage, the girl who passed the checks for him, innocently, she claims.

She tried to commit suicide to escape from the life she was leading, was saved and arrested, and then exposed Valentine. The amounts stolen by Valentine were not large, and the police are at sea in their search for the other swindlers, whose names he gave, because of the disappearance of an important witness. This is John Conklin, who met the men while investigating one of the alleged "fake" firms through which they operated. He is missing, and the police affect to believe he may have been made away with by the gang. Not enough is yet known against any of the men named in Valentine's remarkable confession to warrant indictments being found. One method of swindling said to have been a great favorite with the gang was to buy goods from one house on false representations and then sell them for cash before the fraud could be found out. They made one serious mistake when a bill of goods amounting to $728 was bought of the American Rubber company in the name of John T. Crossman & Co., said to consist of John T. and C. Crossman, and Henry and C. Zelig. It had obtained a fair business rating, and the goods were sent when ordered. When received they were sent to the salesrooms of William H. Hayward, who was told to dispose of them at auction as quickly as possible.

It happened Mr. Hayward is the New York agent of the American Rubber company. He knew it was unusual for any of their goods to be sold at auction, and telegraphed them of the fact he had orders to sell the goods. From this list the property was found to be the same as that sent to Crossman & Co. Legal advice was obtained, and the goods recovered, the swindlers paying all expenses to avoid appearance in court.

In spite of his various confessions Valentine entered pleas of not guilty in all the cases against him when arraigned in court.

ANYTHING TO PLEASE MME. NORDICA.

Manager Grau Is Ready to Give Special Performances for Her Benefit.

New York, Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Maurice Grau today said the doors of the Metropolitan Opera-House were always open to Mme. Nordica and he would welcome her back at any time.

The manager declared should Mme. Nordica decide to return he would give special performances at which she could appear without interfering with the engagements of her concert tour.

"I would like to have Mme. Nordica appear in opera this winter," added Mr. Grau, "and I shall do all I can to further such an arrangement. She need not be a regular member of the company, but could appear at special performances."

ANTHONY COMSTOCK SUES FOR LIBEL

He Wants $50,000 for Being Called a Notorious Blackmailer.

New York, Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Montague Leverson, a man otherwise unknown to fame, had a quarrel Feb. 19 last in the Albany depot of the New York Central railway with Anthony Comstock, President of the Society for the Suppression of Vice. During the proceedings, it is alleged, Leverson said to the surrounding crowd: "Ladies and Gentlemen: This man is Anthony Comstock, a notorious blackmailer, who never earned an honest dollar in his life." Mr. Comstock has concluded he was slandered and brought suit against Leverson today for $50,000 damages.

SHERMAN OPPOSES EXTRA SESSION.

He Outlines a Conservative Policy Which He Favors.

New York, Nov. 11.—[Special.]—At the banquet of the Union League club in Brooklyn tonight Senator Sherman advocated conservatism on the part of the McKinley administration. He thought the Dingley bill should be passed. He opposed an extra session of Congress. "There should be no coinage of silver dollars until we can put into the coin enough silver to make it worth a dollar," he said. He criticised the Cleveland administration.

CARRY THE BIBLE IN YOUR HEAD.

Sage Advice of Mr. Moody to Christian Workers.

New York, Nov. 11.—[Special.]—The attendance at the Moody services increased today and the hall of Cooper Union was filled at both morning and afternoon meetings. Mr. Moody said Christian workers ought to carry the Bible in their heads. "If you start to read the Bible to unbelievers," he continued, "you will frighten them, but if you have it in your head you can get to talking scripture before they know it."

At Mr. Vanderbilt's home, Fifty-seventh street and Fifth avenue, it was said tonight his health had been constantly improving since his return from Newport. He drove in the park for two hours today.

Expense of Office-Seeking.

Candidates for office in the State of New York have to file sworn statements of the amount it cost them to be elected or defeated. Lemuel Ely Quigg, candidate for Congress in a city district, affirms it cost him $6,615 to get elected. This will leave nothing from his first year's salary. George B. McClellan, Tammanyite, gets in for $3,120 less than what it cost his Republican colleague. W. F. Porter, defeated candidate for Governor of the State, schedules an expense account of $525.

EXPEL SIX C.A.A. PLAYERS

DIRECTORS DISCIPLINE INSUBORDINATE FOOTBALL TEAM MEMBERS.

Despite Protests of Capt. Thompson and President Potter They Play for a Pittsburg Club—Charge of "Supposed Professionalism" Is Made—The Men Are W. H. Aldrich, H. G. Hadden, Paul Brown, William Garver, Ben Thomas, and M. K. Stewart.

Six members of the Chicago Athletic Association's crack football eleven were expelled yesterday afternoon by the Board of Directors for insubordination and supposed professionalism. The men are: Paul Brown, end; W. H. Aldrich, quarter back; H. G. Hadden, right tackle; Ben Thomas, left guard; William Graver, right half back; Dr. M. K. Stewart, right guard.

These men, the very best on the team and the strongest players the eleven has boasted for several seasons, against the protests of President Potter and Capt. Thompson, went to Pittsburg on Monday and on Tuesday afternoon played in a game with Allegheny Athletic Association against the Duquesne Athletic club, winning the game for the Allegheny eleven.

Club Officers' Protests Ignored.

When it was known in the club that the men had received requests to come to Pittsburg and play a protest was at once made by the management, but it was of no avail. President Potter as soon as he learned of their departure sent Capt. William Hale Thompson to Pittsburg with a letter from him expostulating with the players, placing before them the inference of professionalism, which must arise from the circumstance, and explaining the stand taken by the association this year for purity in athletics, could not be maintained in the face of such action.

This letter Capt. Thompson on his arrival presented to each of the five men, and personally begged them not to play. But, although several said they were sorry they had gone to Pittsburg, not one refrained from playing.

Expelled in Short Order.

As soon as President Potter learned the men had disregarded the warnings and requests he called a meeting of the Board of Directors and the case was disposed of in short order. The board expelled the men on the grounds of insubordination and supposed professionalism, the inference of compensation being considered strong enough to warrant this action.

Capt. Thompson said last night:

"We regret the necessity of the action, but the reputation of the club and the stand we have taken for pure amateurism in our sports makes such a course inevitable.

"We will play all the substitutes we have and build up the best team we can, and practice double time, securing all the games possible before the contest with the Boston Athletic Association Thanksgiving day. No games will be canceled, and we will endeavor to make the best of a bad situation."

The case of Ben Thomas excited a great deal of comment. He did not go to Pittsburg, but it was only because he couldn't. He advised the others to go, and consequently received the same sentence.

President Potter's Letter.

It will be almost impossible to make a winning team before the game with the Boston Athletics on Thanksgiving day.

President Potter's letter placed the case plainly before the players, and is a strong appeal to their loyalty to the club and city they represent. The text of the letter is as follows:

Chicago, Nov. 9.—Messrs Benjamin Thomas, Paul G. Brown, H. G. Haddon, Aldrich Steward, and Others of the Chicago Athletic Association Football Team, Pittsburg, Pa.—Gentlemen: It having come to my knowledge that you are visiting Pittsburg with the possible intention of playing football with the Allegheny Athletic Association team in a contest with the Pittsburg Athletic club team I feel it my duty to write you on the subject as you probably have not given due consideration to the unfavorable effect such a course on your part would have upon the interest and reputation of the Chicago Athletic Association.

As you are aware the management of C. A. A. is doing everything in its power to raise the standard of athletics and to avoid doing anything that can possibly render it liable to the charge of professionalism primarily, though the association may be entitled to the respect of the world as an amateur athletic association; and, secondly, that the impression that already exists to an extent among the Western universities regarding the existence of professionalism or semi-professionalism in the C. A. A. may be eradicated.

At the time the correspondence was had between the Boston Athletic club and our club regarding the match for Thanksgiving day the President of the Boston club raised

MASTODONS ARE SEEN IN ALASKA.

Stick Indians Describe an Enormous Animal Which They Declare Was Living Five Years Ago.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Copies of the Alaska News of Juneau just received say: "In conversation with a gentleman formerly of Denver, who came out this fall with a party of miners, we learned that the existence of living mastodons near the headwaters of White River was not the mere fabrication of the Northern furriers, but that the Stick Indians had positively told him that not later than five years ago such animals had been seen by them.

"One of the Indians said that while hunting one day in the unknown section he came across an immense track, sunk to a depth of several inches in the moss, and from the description, as the Indian marked it out to him in the sand, it much resembled an elephant's track, and was larger around than a barrel. Upon striking it, the Indian followed up this curious trail, which, to all appearances, was very fresh, and tracking from one immense stride to the other for a distance of some miles he came in full view of his game.

"The hunter gave one look and then turned and fled, as though pursued by the evil one. He described it as being larger than Harper's (the post trader's) store, with great shining yellowish tusks, and a mouth large enough to swallow him at a single gulp. He said the animal was undoubtedly the same as were the huge bones scattered over that section. If such an animal is now in existence, and there is no reason to doubt the veracity of the Indian, as other Indians and also Mr. Harper had confirmed it, they inhabit a section of very high altitude, and one but rarely visited by human beings, and those only Indians.

"We have also no reason to doubt the Indian's tale, for at no very distant period the Yukon country was inhabited by these animals, and hundreds of their massive skeletons found strewn along the creeks are the silent but truthful witnesses."

GOVERNOR NAMES THANKSGIVING DAY.

He Proclaims a Few but Not All of the Reasons Why We Should Give Thanks.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Gov. Altgeld has issued the following Thanksgiving proclamation:

"State of Illinois, Executive Office, Springfield, Ill., Nov. 11.—It is the custom that the Governor set aside one day in each year to be devoted to thanksgiving for the blessings of the past twelve months and to meditation. The year just closing has been free from famine and pestilence, the fields have yielded with unusual abundance to the husbandman's toil, and it is fitting that we should give thanks to Divine Providence for her bounty.

"Now, therefore, I do hereby proclaim Thursday, the 26th day of November, A. D. 1896, as a day of thanksgiving, and I call upon all of our people to lay aside their usual vocations and devote the day to giving thanks for the manifold blessings bestowed upon them during the year.

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great seal of State this 9th day of November, A. D. 1896. JOHN P. ALTGELD, Governor.

"By the Governor.

GIVES CREDENCE TO WAR RUMORS.

Appearance of Admiral Bunce at the Navy Department Renews Gossip of Possible Trouble with Spain.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—From a number of sources today the rumors relating to the probability of war with Spain are confirmed.

It is believed the State Department possesses definite information from Minister Taylor regarding the strong and ungovernable enmity attached to things American in the Spanish mind.

It is said these advices have even gone so far as to sound a note of warning that an outbreak of violence might be expected in various turbulent quarters.

This attitude of Spain is the supposed cause for the appearance at the Navy Department this morning of Admiral Bunce, Commander-in-Chief of the North Atlantic Squadron.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 11.—A cable message from the European Union of Astronomers to Messrs. Chandler and Ritchie announced that the French astronomer, Flammarion, on the night of Nov. 10, observed the Martain Casis Trivium Charontis to be doubled.

CONVICT GETS HIS SHARE.

SUPREME COURT BREAKS THE WILL OF ALONZO C. WOOD.

Testator Expressly Stipulates His Wayward Offspring, Fred L. Wood, Now in the California Penitentiary for Murder, Who Threatened to Kill His Father, Brothers, and Sisters, Should Not Have a Cent, but Highest State Tribunal Rules Otherwise.

In his will, which was admitted to probate in March, 1892, Alonzo C. Wood plainly and unequivocally disinherited his son, Fred L. Wood, who is confined in the California penitentiary under life sentence for murder.

The State Supreme Court has just handed down a decision setting the will aside on the ground its provisions are in conflict with the law. The result will be the estate, amounting to nearly $100,000, must be distributed according to law, and Fred L. Wood will get his share—$15,000 or $20,000.

Mr. Wood left no doubt of the reason why he disinherited his son. The will reads:

"I have another son by the name of Fred L. Wood, who is confined in a penitentiary on a life sentence for the crime of murder. During his boyhood and early manhood I had given him many more advantages than I had given any of my other children, but all my love and care for him only seemed to make him more reckless and wicked.

"For many years previous to his arrest and conviction for murder he had repeatedly threatened that he would take my life, and that of some of his brothers and sisters, and it is my express wish and desire that he shall have nothing whatever from my estate, and I make this statement in this my last will and testament, that there may be no question as to whether or not it was my intention to leave my said son anything."

This is the way the Supreme Court annuls this provision of the will which lay evidently close to Mr. Wood's heart:

The main bequests being void because they violate a Stat elaw the property must go to the heirs, and the clause cutting off Fred L. Wood from a share in the estate is inoperative because a man cannot disinherit a child by simply saying he does not wish to leave it anything.

"In addition to doing this," the decision adds, "he must give the property to some one else, but Mr. Wood's will being void as to his gifts to others the law gives his property to his heirs, including the one he wished to disinherit."

The validity of the will was contested in two separate suits. In that charging undue influence was exercised upon Mr. Wood the jury brought in a verdict against the will, which was set aside by the court, and the suit was dismissed. The other suit was based on the averment the will violated the law against perpetuities. The entire estate with the exception of three bequests of $500 each was placed in trust in the hands of Samuel Baxter Foster, who has since died, and Theodore F. Lawrence, and it was provided, in a general way, that the bulk of the property should be held for division until the youngest grandchild of Mr. Wood should be 25 years of age.

Judge Windes decided against the will eigtheen months ago, but was in doubt whether the minor bequests should stand, as the beneficiaries had not come into court to claim them.

The Supreme Court holds this to be unnecessary, and allows these bequests to stand. Judge Windes held the entire will was a plan which, in its material parts, violated the rule against perpetuities, and that the parts which violated the rule and those which did not were so interwoven it would be impracticable to attempt to separate them.

This decision has been sustained by the Supreme Court.

The rule against perpetuities is that estates cannot be limited beyond twenty-one years and a life in being at the time the will takes effect. If the will had provided that the division should be made when the youngest grandchild was 21 years of age it would have been good.

BURGLARS BURN STALLBERG'S HOUSE.

Irving Park Resident Frightens Them and One Drops a Lighted Lamp on the Carpet.

T. A. Stallberg, No. 2000 Linden avenue, Irving Park, heard burglars in his house early yesterday morning. He climbed out of bed and discovered two men at work packing up his valuables. One of the intruders carried a lamp. The fellow was so taken by surprise at the appearance of Stallberg that he dropped the lamp on the floor and set fire to the carpet. The thieves made their escape, and Stallberg's attention was directed to the blaze. His family ran into the street in their night clothes. The fire department was called, but the house burned before it arrived. The burglars had packed up considerable property preparatory to taking it away, but they left everything in their fright. The loss on the house is $1,500.

SATOLLI MAKES CHARGES OF HERESY.

Accuses Archbishop with Being the Creator of Neocatholicism in the United States.

[SPECIAL CABLE BY JULIAN RALPH.]

London, Nov. 11.—[Copyrighted, 1896, by the New York Journal.]—Your Rome correspondent wires me:

"Cardinal Satolli has just presented to the Pope his report on religious questions in the United States. Although this document is destined not to be published, what it contains is nevertheless perfectly well known, and I am thus in a position to give you interesting information with respect to it. Cardinal Satolli makes a veritable accusation against Dr. Keane and the University of Washington. He accuses Keane of having in several public speeches uttered opinions which bordered on heresy. In accord with Ireland, he endeavored to acclimatize a neocatholicism on American soil. Cardinal Satolli declares that the University of Washington had become the heart of these new ideas, where most bold and risky theories were put forward. Fortunately the removal of Keane has cut short the evil at its root, but he has left behind dangerous disciples in the person of numerous professors of this university, and Cardinal Satolli advises the Pope to deprive them of their offices. But the Cardinal shows himself much more severe against Ireland. He declares this prelate is the creator of neocatholicism in the United States, and he formally accuses him of being an apostle of heresy."

This report has produced a very marked impression at the Vatican, where every one foresees the Pope will adopt the greater portion of the Cardinal's suggestions, and will deprive the professors of Keaneism of their offices and call Ireland to Rome to there offer an explanation. This blow, which has just struck Keane, has, moreover, a more general effect. It is a complete and sudden change in the attitude of the Holy See.

At first Leo XIII. showed a marked preference for Ireland, which did not fail to seem to many to be extraordinary in view of the boldness of this attitude and doctrine of the Archbishop of St. Paul. The latter ostensibly enjoyed the favor of the Vatican, and Rome protected him against the attacks and suspicions of which he was the object. When he came here a few years ago he was accorded a triumphal reception. Today the reaction is complete. Leo XIII. openly and energetically disavows the ideas of Ireland and his group. The neocatholicism which people are attempting to plant in the United States is completely discomfited. The Vatican has repudiated it, and its rival and antagonistic group, led by Mgr. Corrigan, has reconquered the favor of the Holy See.

It is needless to call attention to the fact, how significant and interesting is this new evolution of Leo XIII. from the point of view of the general destinies of contemporary Catholicism. It is old Roman conservatism which has finished by regaining the upper hand. Moreover it is not only in the United States but also in other countries and other fields that the policy of Leo XIII. manifests a tendency to sudden change. The Pope finds it needful to take similar action in France. There is already a stop if not an actual backward movement in another field, that of the social question.

The Vatican is equally undergoing a change of front. The Holy See, which formerly seemed to cover with its protection the party of democratic Christians, is today frightened with their excess and disavows them, particularly in Belgium. The diplomacy of Leo XIII., led for a moment astray by imprudent advisers, is finding again its habitual qualities of tact, circumspection, and sagacity. Leo XIII. takes again in his own hands the reins which he was wrong to abandon to badly advised and unskillful instruments.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 11.—From eminent ecclesiastical authorities having sources of official information it is learned that the attention of Rome has been called to a sermon delivered by Archbishop Ireland at Washington on the occasion of the consecration of Bishop O'Gorman. In this sermon the Archbishop referred to the Bishops as the main strength of the Catholic Church. As the Jesuits and other religions have no Bishops the expression was construed to be a reflection on the orders. The sermon has been the subject of recent adverse comment in the Civilta Catolica, the organ of Jesuits at Rome. From the recent publicity at Rome given to the Ireland sermon it is thought that this is the basis for the reports that Archbishop Ireland will be removed. It is believed that the Pope's decision will be adverse to those seeking Ireland's removal.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 11.—When Archbishop Ireland's attention was called today to the published rumor that his recent utterances were disapproved at Rome and that he would be removed from the See of St. Paul, he refused to dignify the rumor by making a statement in regard to it, laughing away the whole matter as unworthy of notice.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—At the Papal Legation it was stated that Archbishop Ireland had not been asked to Rome up to the present time and that there was no indication that he would be asked.

Other Prime Favorites Are Joseph G. Cannon and A. J. Hopkins.

FIFER, CARR, AND MADDEN NEXT.

When William E. Mason made his stumping tour of Illinois during the campaign just closed he also apparently made many friends among the country Republican editors. THE TRIBUNE wired the editors of all the Republican papers in the State outside of Chicago for their preferences for United States Senator to succeed John M. Palmer. One hundred and forty-three answers were received and W. E. Mason was the first choice named in ninety-five. The remaining forty-eight preferences were divided between over a dozen other aspirants for political honors.

Few of the editors were unwilling to give the reason for the faith that is in them. Those who declare for Mason say he is a stalwart, that he has worked in and out of season for the success of the Republican party, and that he is right on the money question and a moderate tariff man. Those who speak for the others are equally eulogistic. Among the other recipients of these flattering words were Robert R. Hitt and Joseph G. Cannon, whose long services in Congress are pointed out as reasons for promotion.

Preferences in a Table.

The preferences of the Republican editors are tabulated as follows:

W. E. Mason	95

Aurora Daily News.

Aurora, Ill., Nov. 10.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—W. E. Mason is deserving of consideration because of his persistence, and for his personal services in the campaign. Ex-Congressman George E. Adams would make a safe, creditable Senator.

Albion Journal.

Albion, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The Senatorial convention for this, the Forty-fourth, district indorsed the candidacy of William E. Mason for United States Senator, and the majority of the people in this portion of the State appear to favor Mason.

With Cullom and Mason in the United States Senate the State may with pride claim to be the peer of any of her sister States in ability and statesmanship. We in this part of the State to a Republican are for "Billy" Mason "first, last, and all the time."

Brown County Republican.

Mount Sterling, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—William E. Mason is the choice of the people of Brown County for United States Senator. He received the indorsement of the Republican county convention. A. J. Hopkins, however, has many friends here.

Bunker Hill Gazette.

Bunker Hill, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—This county has expressed itself for Mason. I have no personal preference. We must have no radical monetary changes and a conservative tariff policy that will protect capitalist and laborer without fostering monopolies to the hurt of the mechanic. There is no room for jingo politics.

He is vigorous, in the prime of life, and will make an ideal mate for our present honored Senator—Shelby M. Cullom. Ninety-nine out of every hundred in Ford County hope to see Mr. Mason elected. He would be a valuable assistant as Senator and would also represent his State as no other son of Illinois could at the present time.

The very fact that he has failed to manipulate certain elements in the State is evidence of his honesty. The Republicans of La Salle County in open convention have indorsed him for this position. They know from personal contact his political sentiments.

Below are given the editorial opinions of those who favor R. R. Hitt for the Senatorship:

Leaf River Mirror.

Leaf River, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—R. R. Hitt is our choice for United States Senator. He has unsurpassed ability to represent the State of Illinois in the Senate. W. E. Mason is my choice with Mr. Hitt out of the way. The party owes it to him for the magnificent work done.

Ogle County Express.

Polo, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—My first preference and I believe that of the entire people of Ogle County is for Congressman Hitt. He is fitted to honor the place by long experience in various branches of the public service, he has not been mixed up in factional quarrels, and ought to be equally acceptable to Chicago and the State at large. My other preferences would be for Cannon, Mason, or Carr, in the order named.

Rockford Register-Gazette.

Rockford, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—If Illinois desires to hold a place in the Senate which will bring her the greatest respect and enable her to wield the most influence in that great council the requirements will be met by the choice of Mr. Hitt. He is thoroughly versed on most domestic questions and in international affairs his personal authority is recognized by all public men.

Savanna Times.

Savanna, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In answer to your telegram received this forenoon will say that the Times is for R. R. Hitt for United States Senator if he is a candidate; otherwise for M. B. Madden of Cook County. I believe he represents the activity of the Republican party and Chicago ought to be considered in the selection on this occasion.

Freeport, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Robert R. Hitt for Senator is better equipped than any other man in Illinois.

Rochelle Register.

Rochelle, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Our preference for Senator is R. R. Hitt of Mount Morris, who is certainly the peer of any man from the West now in public life. His qualifications make it certain that he would honor the State of Illinois in thus honoring him.

Valley Chronicle.

St. Charles, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—We prefer for United States Senator either R. R. Hitt or W. E. Mason. Hitt is perhaps the better fitted of the two for the place by reason of broad experience, culture, and rare attainments, but Mason is gifted and has earned recognition.

Oak Park Vindicator.

Oak Park, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—We are not yet prepared to say whom we should prefer for United States Senator. Looking over the field, however casually it seems to me, that Congressman Hitt has the experience, statesmanship, and general fitness for the position.

Kankakee, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Under present circumstances Congressman Hitt is our choice. His qualifications and locality fit him for the place.

Rochelle Herald.

Rochelle, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Robert R. Hitt is our choice and the choice of this Congressional district. He is undoubtedly the most able Congressman in the State, and is the peer of any Congressman in the House of Representatives.

Belvidere Republican.

Belvidere, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Robert R. Hitt is eminently equipped and preëminently the man of the hour. A State that has sent to the Senate such representatives as Logan and Cullom would do itself honor in selecting Mr. Hitt.

Rockford Republic.

Rockford, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Our first choice is Robert R. Hitt, because of his great grasp upon both national and foreign affairs, his distinguished public services, the record of which reaches from the days of Lincoln to those of McKinley, his lofty conception of the duty of a representative of the people, and of the demonstrated fact that in statecraft he is one of the intellects of the great Middle West. Our second choice is William E. Mason.

Lee County Times.

Paw Paw, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—R. R. Hitt is my choice for Senator. If he does not become a candidate Mason is my man. He has the proper credentials, his work in the last campaign recommends him for the honor, and he is deserving of it. I am therefore in favor of his election considering the above provisions.

Mason is its second choice.

Hoopeston Chronicle.

Hoopeston, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—By reason of his great ability, wide experience in national affairs, and his eminent services to the State, and to the country, Joseph G. Cannon of Danville, in my opinion, would be an ideal United States Senator.

Rossville Independent.

Rossville, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Our choice for Senator is Congressman Cannon. His long experience in Congress eminently fits him for the place.

FOR HOPKINS AND FOR FIFER.

Aurora Congressman and the Ex-Governor Have Followers.

Newspaper men who prefer A. J. Hopkins and those who lean to ex-Governor Fifer telegraph as follows:

Harvard Herald.

Harvard, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—My choice for United States Senator to succeed Gen. Palmer is Albert J. Hopkins, Congressman from the Eighth District. His career in Congress, covering a period of ten years, together with unquestionable ability, has abundantly qualified him to make the State of Illinois an ideal Senator, a worthy successor of Logan, Yates, and Oglesby.

Elgin Courier.

Elgin, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I favor Albert J. Hopkins. Mr. Hopkins was the choice of a considerable proportion of the people of Illinois for Governor. He has served this district long and with distinction in Congress. This county and district are the banner Republican county and district of Illinois in size of majority, and is always giving a Republican majority and deserves recognition. It has never yet been recognized by the party. Mr. Hopkins would honor the place as well as be honored by it.

Richmond Gazette.

Richmond, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The Gazette's choice for Senator is Congressman Albert J. Hopkins of Aurora. In ability and patriotism he is second to none. He is a member of no ring or machine, and his years of experience at Washington have given him an insight into national affairs that few have, thereby fitting him for additional honors. His Republicanism is of the stalwart order, and he is the acknowledged champion of the rights of the boys who wore the blue.

Byron Express.

Byron, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—A. J. Hopkins of Aurora is my first choice, because he is a man of the people. William E. Mason is my second choice.

Manito Express.

Manito, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—My preference for United States Senator is Joseph Fifer, but, as he has not declared himself a candidate, my second choice is William Mason. He has shown himself a faithful servant to the Republican party, and in the late campaign demonstrated that he would be an able and trusty representative of the State of Ilinois.

Rock Island Daily Union.

Rock Island, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Our preference for United States Senator is Joe Fifer, because he is a man among men.

Leroy Journal.

MADDEN AND OTHERS HAVE FRIENDS

Chicago Alderman Praised and Words Spoken for Others.

Martin B. Madden, N. E. Worthington, J. W. Gibson, W. A. Northcott, and W. J. Calhoun, all have friends as follows:

Chester Tribune.

Chester, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—My preference for United States Senator to succeed Senator Palmer is Martin B. Madden of Chicago for the reason that the country districts of the State concede the Senatorship to a Cook County man and Mr. Madden would be satisfactory to the Republicans of the State, being able, deserving, and in every way qualified for the position. He is as much entitled to the distinction as any member of the party and he would be a safe and efficient representative.

Robinson Argus.

Robinson, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—If a Chicagoan is to be United States Senator, and I think it should be a Chicagoan, I favor Martin B. Madden, because I consider him a representative Chicagoan and a man who would fully represent the whole State, a stalwart Republican, and a man of unquestioned ability and special qualifications.

Warren Sentinel.

Warren, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—We are for Madden because we believe he is an efficient public servant and a man who would look after the welfare of Illinois.

Abingdon Enterprise-Herald.

Abingdon, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Clark E. Carr is our choice for United States Senator. Knox is the banner Republican county and deserves recognition. William E. Mason is second choice.

Galesburg Republican-Register.

Galesburg, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The Republican-Register favors the election of Clark E. Carr to the United States Senate. His personal qualifications, aside from party service or the question of locality, fit him for the position. He has a large and comprehensive knowledge both of national and international questions as well as of matters of moment to Illinois.

Knoxville Republican.

Knoxville, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—We favor Clark E. Carr for United States Senator. Knox County is solid for him.

Greenville Advocate.

Greenville, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I am for W. A. Northcott for United States Senator. He is equal in ability and popularity to any of the distinguished gentlemen now seeking that high office in the State of Illinois.

Lewiston News.

Lewiston, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—We favor N. E. Worthington because he is right on the money question and is the brainiest man in the State of Illinois.

West Salem News.

West Salem, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Our choice for Senator is James W. Gibson of Newton. He is well qualified and an honest citizen and politician.

Warsaw Bulletin.

Warsaw, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The Bulletin's first choice for United States Senator would be W. F. Calhoun if his location were not a bar, but if the Senatorship is to go to Northern Illinois I am heartily in favor of W. E. Mason of Chicago. He is the peer of any of his competitors in point of ability, few equal him in legislatve experience, and none approach him in constant, effective party service. Success never spoiled nor has defeat ever soured him. He has always labored zealously and to a purpose for the supremacy of Republican principles, and his ardor never abated when the fodder rack receded from view.

Editors Who Declare for the Choice of the Assembly.

Newspaper men who decline to express preferences declare themselves as follows:

Bloomington Pantagraph.

Bloomington, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The Pantagraph for United States Senator wants a Republican of high character, ability, dignity, and honesty who will cordially support the administration in the enactment of legislation along sound money and sound tariff lines.

Nashville Journal.

Nashville, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Illinois must be represented in the Senate by a clean and able man. We are for any candidate with these qualifications.

Joliet, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—When Senator Cullom was reëlected it was tacitly agreed that Cook County should name the successor to Gen. Palmer. In the late State convention Cook County helped Will County nominate her candidate for Attorney-General, and Will County feels kindly towards Cook in consequence. In view of these facts we believe that when Cook County decides upon who her candidate will be Will County will be ready to give him a cordial support.

Waterloo Republican.

Waterloo, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The Republican has no choice for United States Senator. Illinois has many able men. The candidate should be a pure man.

Illinois (Springfield) State Journal.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Inasmuch as Chicago filed a claim upon one of the Senatorial seats some years ago, and now asks for the one to be vacated by Palmer, I am not ready to express any preference now.

Two thousand ballots were thrown away because the people who sent them in disregarded the rules governing the contest. Only one ballot will be accepted from one man—and he must be a voter—and one ballot only may be placed in an envelope.

HOT CRITICISM FROM GOV. ALTGELD.

He Uses the Decapitation of Postmaster Ridgely as Text for an Anti-Administration Sermon.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—The removal of Postmaster Reddick M. Ridgely for "pernicious activity" in the late campaign calls forth the following from Gov. Altgeld:

"Mr. Ridgely has made one of the best Postmasters that have ever filled that office. He was thorough and attentive in the discharge of his duties. In this campaign he unfortunately followed the example set him by Postmaster Hesing at Chicago and by the whole crowd of Federal appointees from Washington and made one or two speeches; but he made them on the opposite side from what the other fellows did. He was respectful toward the administration he represented, but advocated the election of Mr. Bryan.

"Now he is discharged for violating the civil service rules while the other Federal officials named are commended for violating the same rules. This simply shows the fraudulent character of the present Federal administration. It is not and it has not been honest in a single thing that it had to deal with.

"From the days that the capital was located in the Valley of the Potomac down to this time there has not been such a collection of contemptible little fellows rattling around in high places as there has been at Washington during the last four years.

"Some bugologist could render the cause of science invaluable service by just buying the whole collection and keeping them as specimens of little things."

"What do you think of the claim of Frank Jones that there were 50,000 gold Democrats in Illinois?"

"That is one of those claims that make images smile. Look at the situation a moment. Two years ago these so-called gold Democrats were in our party, or, as they would say, 'We were united then.' We had no such terrible amount of boodle and irresistible forces to meet then as we had to meet this year, and yet we did not elect a single Congressman in our State at that time and the Republican majority was nearly 180,000. This year we had to meet a combination of adverse conditions and forces such as never before confronted any political party and probably never will again, and these gold Democrats were against us and worked with the enemy and yet we have elected at least five Congressmen and reduced the Republican majority by nearly one-third.

"This shows that these men are a curse to the party they are with and a help to the party they oppose. So long as they were in the Democratic party it was a neutral party—a party with both its hands and feet tied; but the moment we got rid of them the party developed the strength of a giant, and it will sweep this country."

PROMINENT YOUNG PEOPLE MARRIED.

Wealth and Fashion of Philadelphia Turns Out to Witness McMichael-Harrison Wedding.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 11.—The wealth and fashion of Philadelphia were crowded into St. Luke's Episcopal Church to witness the wedding of Miss Ellen Nixon Harrison, daughter of Mr. Charles C. Harrison, and Mr. Campbell Emary McMichael. Miss Harrison is one of the most popular girls in Philadelphia's exclusive set. For several years she has been a leader in the younger circle, and many lavish entertainments have been given in her honor.

Mr. McMichael is the son of Col. Clayton McMichael and is associated with his father and brother in the conduct of the North American. He is a member of the Rittenhouse club, Philadelphia Barge club, and Philadelphia City Troop.

Mr. Harrison, the bride's father, is the Provost of the University of Pennsylvania and one of the wealthiest citizens of Philadelphia.

The bridemaids were Miss Esther White Harrison, Miss Lalite Lesley, Miss Helen Douglass Bickley, Miss Edith Lewis Waine, Miss Sarah Ann Frazier, and Miss Emily Harrison Thorp. They were attired in white moire with white stocks, wore black chiffon hats lined with pink, and carried large bunches of white chrysanthemums tied with pink ribbons. Miss Karoline Nixon Newhall was maid of honor. The bride wore a white satin gown trimmed with pearls and lace.

The best man was the groom's brother, Clayton Fotteral McMichael. The ushers were Dr. Charles Harrison Frazier, Dr. Sherbourne W. Dougherty, Mr. Adolph George Rosengarten, Mr. George L. Harrison Jr. of Philadelphia, Mr. Robert McLane Jr. of Baltimore, Mr. Augustus Rene Moen and Mr. Lewis Brown Gawtry of New York, and Mr. William F. Judson of Dobbs Ferry.

SOUTH BOSTONIANS ARE OFFENDED.

Demand That the Editor of the Century Apologize for Alleged Insults Contained in Miss Poor's Story.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—South Boston thinks Richard Watson Gilder, the editor of the Century Magazine, is endeavoring to evade the apology that was demanded of him by the South Boston Citizens' Association for the publication of the story "A Little Fool," by Agnes Blake Poor, which appeared in the October number of the Century, and which, the people say, slandered that section. The following letter has been received by the Rev. Albert Eugene George, who was deputed by the Citizens' Association to demand from the Century people a retraction of the statements which appeared in the story:

"My Dear Sir: While I was absent from this city your letter was received, and I immediately answered by Mr. Johnson. I would have written earlier, but have been expecting to hear from the author of the story to which you refer. Meantime, as you must know, there was not the slightest editorial intention to give pain to the inhabitants of any neighborhood. In fact, I suppose that Miss Poor's idea was to satirize the narrowness of certain Bostonians, and by no means to injure or annoy a community. Indeed, quite the contrary. However, in a few days I may hear from her directly. Meantime, I would express sincere regret that the story should have been misunderstood in any way, or should have given any offense. With very cordial regards, and thanking you for the courteous terms of your letter, I remain,

"Very truly, yours,

"R. W. GILDER."

"The letter made the South Bostonians more angry than they were before," said a prominent citizen of the district today, when shown the letter. "What Miss Poor's idea was in 'satirizing' the narrowness of certain Bostonians will have to be guessed. The people of South Boston strenuously object to being made 'satire' targets of, even though Miss Poor does see fit to pick them out as endowed with narrowness. The letter does not explain many questions that were asked. It does not make any replies to what was said of the locality itself, which was held up to the world as one of degradation and filth, and, finally, it does not answer all the questions. Many letters have been sent to New York by prominent men of this city, who are trying to find out, if possible, who Agnes Blake Poor is. All efforts up to the present time have been unsuccessful. A complete apology from the Century Magazine is demanded."

WATSON LETTER IS OUT.

AFTER DEFEAT HE PUBLISHES IT IN HIS OWN PAPER.

He Accepted the Nomination, He Says, Only Because He Had Promised to Do So and Then He Roasts Chairman Butler and the Popocrats to the Queen's Taste—Democrats Are at the Feet of Wall Street and Lowest in Dust of Political Abasement.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Watson's letter, accepting the Vice-Presidential nomination, sees the light of day through his official organ, the People's party paper. Tom is back at his old stand as editor, and he begins by devoting seven columns to his letter and four columns to "T. E. W." editorials, in which he claims the fusionists who sacrificed him brought on the defeat of Bryan.

He says the Populists would certainly have elected Bryan if Watson had been on the ticket.

His letter is for the most part a long review of the circumstances of his nomination. Quotations from the letter, which Chairman Butler would not allow to be published, are as follows:

"I accept," he says, "simply because I promised to do so." He declared that the Populists scared Democracy into taking the silver side of the financial question. Democrats, with brazen effrontery, renounced the Republican principles they had been holding and boldly swallowed the Populists' creed. After the St. Louis Populist convention some of the Populist leaders, he declares, developed a wonderful tenderness toward the national banking system and the national bankers whom their party had from policy assailed.

Blame for Chairman Butler.

He blames Senator Butler with preventing such arrangements as would redound to the benefit of him (Watson), saying:

"Dear Sir: Your letter giving me formal notice of my nomination by the People's party for the office of Vice-President has been received. It is solely because of my promise to do so that I accept the nomination. The unusual conditions confronting us must be my excuse for submitting to the public a fair statement of the facts touching this remarkable campaign, in order that all unprejudiced minds may reach just conclusions.

"As the time for beginning the Presidential campaign of 1896 approached the Democratic party found itself in a dying condition, and it resorted to a desperate remedy to save itself from dissolution. It publicly renounced the Republican policies which it had already enacted into law, and professed the Populist creed which it had bitterly assailed."

Speaking of the Democratic condition he says: "During the dreary years of 1893, 1894, and 1895, when Republicans and Democrats alike were falling over each other in the effort to be first at Wall street's feet, and lowest in the dust of the political self-abasement to the trusts, the national banks, the railroads, the bondholders, and the gold speculators, the People's party was the one champion of the people. It stood fearlessly against the hungry hordes of class legislation. It proclaimed constantly its undying antagonism to Wall street and its policies. It held aloft the sacred banner of a people's rights and called for patriots to rise and defend the republic.

Did Not Resist the Tempter.

"Since the bugle note of Roderick woke the Highlands and the fiery cross sped from mountain to glen and from glen to hamlet there has been no such spontaneous outburst of popular enthusiasm as marked the growth of the People's party. One creed, one purpose, one hope, one inspiration moved us all, and had we sternly put temptation aside and nominated a straight Populist ticket at St. Louis, one man from the West and one from the South, we would have swept this land from the South: we would have swept this land from sea to sea."

"At Chicago, the Democratic managers having adopted the leading Populist principles, nominated for the first place on the ticket a candidate who indorses those principles.

"But there was a powerful minority present which protested against the nominee and against the platform. To pacify this anti-Bryan element in Bryan's own party they named for the second place on the ticket a candidate who represents the minority element of the Chicago convention as thoroughly as Bryan represents the majority.

"In the delirium of joy among the silver men which followed their victory the representatives of the Eastern corporate interests, railroad interests, and manufacturing interests shrewdly manipulated the nomination of Mr. Sewall, and thus, before the Bryan men well knew what had been done, they had been checkmated in the very hour of their rejoicing.

"The Democrats seem to resent as a strange piece of impertinence the fact that the Populists dared to nominate a ticket differing at the rear end from theirs, coming to them with the 2,000,000 votes they were begging for and piteously needing.

"I can say with the perfect assurance of telling the unqualified truth that my arrival on the field of battle has not been welcomed as heartily as Blucher was received by Wellington at Waterloo. They want my reinforcements, but they do not want me to leave them. They need Blucher's troops, but they draw the line on Blucher. This is hardly fair either to Blucher or his troops, nor is it the best way to defeat Napoleon. For this attitude upon the part of the Democratic managers I believe that you, Senator, are largely responsible.

"You made no effort to have me recognized; you publicly stated that I would not be notified of my nomination; you went into the fusion policy over my written protest with all the zeal of a man who wanted to elect the Democratic ticket. In this I think you were wrong.

"As Chairamn of the Populist committee the party certainly expected you to do all you could to elect the Populist ticket. Had you demanded Mr. Sewall's withdrawal from the ticket he would have been withdrawn.

"Call Down" for Chairman Butler.

"I have a letter from you in which you state that the Democratic committee expected you to make the demand, but you did not make it. From the perversity of temper with which the Democratic managers have refused to do the right thing by the Populists it would seem that they prefer McKinleyism to anything which would seem to be partly a Populist triumph. Their settled purpose is to couple Bryan's election with the complete destruction of the Populist party.

"They are willing to use the Populist nominee as a lever to move Populist votes, but not as an ally who had any rights. To elect Mr. Bryan the Populists' votes are necessary, and he cannot get them if I should come off the tickets voluntarily, or be virtually forced off by the Sewall fusions.

"If you and Mr. Jones think the Populists will vote for Mr. Bryan after they realize that Watson has been practically pushed off the ticket by fusion deals you are making a huge blunder. Bryan is being ruined by the efforts to force Sewall's election also. Populists will not vote a ticket which is all Democratic."

COMING WEEK IN DRAMA.

VARIETY TO SUCCEED LEGITIMATE IN MOST DOWN-TOWN THEATERS.

Miss Nelly McHenry and Albert Chevalier Among the Newcomers—"Dorcas" and "Heartsease" Will Continue at McVicker's and the Great Northern Respectively—Popularity of Continuous Vaudeville—Sketch of Miss Alice Rose Ettinger.

Albert Chevalier.

THERE will be a dearth of what is known as the legitimate drama at the down-town theaters next week, and we shall suffer an invasion of the variety artist. Every one has heard of Mr. Albert Chevalier, who begins a fortnight's engagement at Hooley's on Sunday next. He brings a good company with him, but he and his songs will constitute the chief attraction to the public. Mr. Chevalier was one of the first music hall artists in London to raise the tone of variety entertainment. He made it plain that the lover of the lighter sorts of theatrical entertainment might be interested in artistic characterization which had nothing risky about it. Others have followed in his footsteps, so that at the present time the London music hall is the resort of all sorts and conditions of men and women, instead of being a place where respectable people were not supposed to go.

At the Grand Opera-House Mr. Richard Mansfield will be succeeded by Miss Nelly McHenry in "A Night in New York," a transition from the sublime to the ridiculous indeed. Nevertheless, the musical farce is likely to prove successful, as it is brought up to date by the inclusion of new songs and dances. The company includes many well-known names, such as John Webster, Charles Morrison, Albert Mayer, Henrietta Lee, Viola Raynor, Fanny Brooks, and La Petit Rosa.

The Columbia will present a piece of a like nature. "Brownies" belongs to the semi-vaudeville species and is too well known to require particular recommendation beyond the mention of the fact that it is enhanced by novelties such as the instrumental performance of Messrs. Newhouse and Waffle. The popularity of the piece was marked by its career in Canada, so much so that the management has decided to hire a house for its representation in London next year.

McVicker's remains true to "Dorcas" for another week, so that the only real play at the first-class houses after Sunday will be "Heartsease" at the Great Northern—not a very bright prospect for lovers of the drama. The lighter forms of amusement are at present in strong demand, and the regular theaters have to do something to contend with the growing popularity of the continuous vaudeville style of entertainment. Still, it is a pity that we should have to go a week without a single first-class play.

Miss Alice Rose Ettinger, the young singer mentioned in a recent Paris letter to THE TRIBUNE as shortly to appear at the Opera Comique in that city, is a native of Oregon, Ill. Through the kind offices of Mme. Melba, who has greatly interested herself in Miss Ettinger, she sang for Massenet. He suggested "Lakme" as an opera especially suited for her first appearance, and highly commended her voice. Mme. Marchesi pronounced her the most promising pupil now in her charge, and altogether, should these pleasant prophecies of the three—Marchesi, Melba, and Massenet—be fulfilled, Miss Ettinger's career will be a bright one. She is in her 20th year. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Ettinger of Waterloo, Ia., where the family has resided for the last ten years. Her education was obtained in private schools and through instruction at home. Her mother gave her the first lessons in music, and for five years remained her only teacher. In 1893 Miss Ettinger came to Chicago to study with Mrs. Clarence Eddy, with whom she went abroad the following year. Immediately on her arrival in London she was offered a position in the Carl Rosa Opera company. This, however, she refused, and went to study with Mme. Marchesi instead. In six weeks she was placed in the artists' class. She is mentioned as having a good knowledge of Italian, and also as having made excellent progress in French and German. Miss Ettinger's father, who is himself a singer, is of German descent, and of a musical family. Her voice is said to resemble in quality that of Mme. Melba. Next summer she expects to make a short visit to her family at Waterloo, Ia.

Mr. Jan Van Oordt, the Dutch violinist, arrived in the city yesterday to fulfill an engagement with the Chicago Orchestra on Friday and Saturday of this week. He is a small man, not over five feet two inches tall, with a delicate yet strong face, large gray eyes, and brown hair. There is something in his face and the way he wears his hair that recalls Sarasate—the Sarasate of years ago. Boyish and earnest, he is not handsome until he smiles; then his face glows. He is young, 21 it appears, but he seems scarcely as old as that.

In his possession are two rare Stradivarius violins. He was playing on one of them when a reporter for THE TRIBUNE called yesterday to interview him. But there was no interview until this especial violin, the one bought of Sig. Nicolini, Mme. Patti's husband, was carefully put away. It is a violin with an interesting history. The age of the instrument is 169 years. It was originally the possession of Paganini, and at his death inherited by his son, Baron Achille Paganini. In 1853 the violin became the property of a Parisian connoisseur, who sold it to Count de Vireille. About five years ago Sig. Nicolini became its owner. He in turn sold it to Mr. Van Oordt. After having been for so many years in the hands of collectors it will now once more be heard in concert.

"My first experience as a musician," said the young violinist yesterday, "was at the age of 3. I was born in Batavia, where my father was chief engineer for the government in Dutch India. And it was an engineer that I also was destined to be. But an accordeon turned my fate. When my people went back to Holland, which they did when I was 2½ years old, they took with them an Indian woman as housekeeper. She played on an accordeon, to which I listened with such rapt admiration that one was bought for me at a kirmess. It was a small affair, but I learned to play it well enough to be promoted to a larger one. As I improved the size of the accordeons given me in succession grew larger, until at last the one in my possession was almost as large as myself. To carry it about the house was a serious inconvenience, so I tied a string to it and dragged it wherever I might want to go. When I was 6 years old I began to study the violin, on a little instrument suited to my age. At 10 I played in concert, and I was better pleased then than I have ever been since. Having no orchestra to play with, and not liking a piano accompaniment, I selected a Bach sonata to play alone. It was a great joy and a great honor to play before the public, and I thought of nothing else. When one is an artist things are different." And a serious look came into the boyish face.

JAN VAN OORDT.

"Afetr four years of work at school, with the violin as a secondary consideration, I still held to my notion as a child to be an artist. My grandparents, though, on both sides of the house, were against it. I must be an engineer like my father, who also held the same opinion. Only my mother, whom I lost just three months ago, stood by me. She wished that I might be an artist. Two weeks were given me in which to decide. When the time was elapsed I thought, as I had always thought, that I must be an artist. With my mother's help I gained the day, and to the conservatory of The Hague I went. At 16 I graduated with first prize. Then for four years I studied at Luttich with César Thompson. Eleven hours a day I studied. 'Courage?' Yes, but one must have courage to do anything well. In the acquiring of technic long study can be pursued, but my bow has often dropped from my hand. If I could only do now what I feel, what I hear in the things—but I cannot do a tenth part of it.

"I remain in this country playing in concert until next spring—May, perhaps. My father promised he would join me in February if things went well," concluded Mr. Van Oordt, with a sudden smile, "and I hope they may."

TO GIVE PETS A SHOW.

COMING EXHIBIT OF HOUSEHOLD FAVORITES, LEGGED AND WINGED.

Queer Animals Will Be in Evidence, and Some Have Already Arrived and Been Tagged—Police Sergeant Brings In a Bundle of Alligators—A Woman Sends Turtles—Beasts of High and Low Degree on Equal Footing for Once.

PERSONS who love domestic pets have a treat in store for them when the Household Pet and Poultry Show opens at No. 130 Michigan avenue on Dec. 8.

Through the enterprise of the management, Chicago is to have the first show of the kind ever attempted. Many strange animals, and many familiar ones which seem stranger still when considered under the classification of "household pets," will be in evidence.

A trained donkey, a "talking" dog, a pair of alligators, an "educated" fox, a pugilistic monkey, and a pelican are among the odds and ends of exhibits offered yesterday. The supply of "freaks" is almost unlimited, and any part of the show that is not funny is sure to be interesting.

There will be blooded dogs and brainy dogs; cats with pedigrees and trained cats: common curs that know lots of things, and high-bred dogs that know nothing and don't need to; and there will be prizes enough for the best in all classes.

The most interesting feature, perhaps, will be the astonishing variety of things which some people class as "pets."

Turtles for Pets.

A woman in Calumet avenue will send a family of turtles. She told Secretary McGuire yesterday that the "sweetest one in the lot" had been crushed under a heavy trunk by a "stupid servant girl" and would not be able to attend the show.

Nearly every household in the land is the possessor of some kind of dumb pet, but no one has attempted before to make a representative collection of the "common people" among them. There have been dog and cat shows and other exclusive exhibitions designed for a favored few of blue blood and high degree, but the great host of more common pets and four-footed friends of humanity has hitherto been forgotten or neglected for the want of family records.

From the moment the present plan was announced it became evident that thousands of people have suddenly awakened to a consciousness that they have neglected to prove to the public that they possess the smartest dog, cat, or whatever pet it may be, in the city, and they all wish to embrace the present opportunity.

Then, too, it seems that everybody is united in the opinion that justice should be done, and for a time, at least, the household pet should be crowned and feasted on public adulation.

Promises to Be a Fad.

"Society will take it up," declared a student of fads yesterday. "The pet show is simply an enlargement and an improvement of the 'animal race' fad now raging in the East. I predict it will be a great success. The pursuit of a fad is the result of a public realization of the fact that some deserving thing or set of things has been too long overlooked or neglected."

F. L. McGuire and J. M. Martin, the officials of the prospective exhibition, are beginning to realize what it means to touch a responsive chord in the hearts of the American public.

Both have been interested before in dog and cat shows, fairs, and trade exhibitions. In looking about for new fields to enter it was suggested that a miscellaneous pet show would be attractive. A little investigation proved the possibilities of such a scheme were almost unlimited. Mr. McGuire gave the outline of his plan to a reporter for THE TRIBUNE. A brief advance notice was published. Since then the promoters have been buried in applications for space and offers of exhibits.

In looking over the list of entries it is plain that the public believes the term "household pet" is capable of including nearly everything that flies, swims, or travels about on four legs or more.

The space to be given to poultry has been cut down in order to make room for the unexpected rush of other pets. Eighty cats are already entered, 500 pigeons, and nearly 1,500 chickens, ducks, geese, turkeys, and other fowl are on the list.

Demure Trick Donkey.

A demure, pale gray donkey was among the entries yesterday. He received his early education in an Indiana coal mine, where he did the work of a locomotive on a miniature underground railroad. Some years ago he became the property of a South Side family, and his condition in life was much improved. As a companion for the juvenile members of the family he grew popular in the neighborhood. With the advent of the bicycle craze he lost his job as a beast of burden, and has since turned his attention to study. His young owner declares he can do "tricks and things," and that he "knows more than folks."

The animal has been rechristened "Bryan." He has a high forehead and a resolute expression about the corners of his mouth. He answers questions addressed to him by nodding or shaking his head to indicate "yes" and "no." In this way he is able to "tell fortunes" if properly questioned, and he will be installed as the "only and original animal fortune teller."

Enter the Alligators.

Yesterday morning a police sergeant presented himself at Mr. McGuire's office and deposited a large bundle wrapped in a newspaper on the Secretary's desk.

[Dress worn by Miss Ellis Jeffreys in "His Little Dodge" at the Royalty Theater, London.]

"There's an exhibit for you," he remarked.

Thinking the visitor had his dates mixed Mr. McGuire began to explain that he was sorry but the Pure Food Show had closed and the exhibit was too late.

"That's not food," replied the Sergeant, "it's alligators."

From a safe distance Mr. McGuire went on to state that he was in no particular hurry to install exhibits as the show would not open for three weeks.

"O, that's all right," said the proprietor of the bundle. "Just throw them in a corner out of the way; they will sleep for three weeks easy!"

A woman of uncertain age called during the morning, armed with a bundle of photographs of a dignified Sir Thomas Cat. She anxiously inquired if she would be allowed to place "Tommy" in evidence when the show opened, and if Mr. Martin would be sure to see that "Tommy" was not allowed to associate with "common" cats. She departed with a happy smile and a blue ticket inscribed: "Cat exhibit No. 73."

In the afternoon Mr. Martin received by a messenger boy a life-sized photograph of "Tommy" on which was written: "Yours with love, Tommy."

TWO NEW PLAYS FOR BERNHARDT.

Canadian Poet Laureate Writes One by Special Order.

Montreal, Que., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Louis H. Frechette, the Canadian poet laureate, read his new play last night at a reception given in his residence.

The play was written by order for Sarah Bernhardt, and when she was here last he read part of it to her. It is written in blank verse, and contains five acts.

The subject is to a great extent historical and deals with early Italian scenes. It is called "Veronica," after a well-known historical woman of that name, and the part which is destined for Mme. Sarah will give her an opportunity to display all her magnificent gifts. It abounds in tragic situations.

He is also writing another play for Bernhardt, and this will be a real Canadian tragedy, and the heroine will be an Indian maiden who falls in love with a white officer, and who, rather than betray him to her tribe, sacrifices herself by suicide.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS.

ANECDOTES FROM MRS. COWDEN-CLARKE'S VOLUME.

Interesting Side Lights on Many of the Noted Men and Women of a Vanished Generation—Keats and Shelley, Lamb and Landor, Dickens and Jerrold, Mendelssohn and Malibran, All Were Numbered Among the Friends of the Aged Author.

Mary Cowden-Clarke.

THERE is an almost artless simplicity in the style of Mary Cowden-Clarke's cheerful book of reminiscences, "My Long Life" (Dodd, Mead & Co.). At the age of 87 she writes with happy enthusiasm of the days when as a child she "crept round to where Leigh Hunt's hand rested on the back of the sofa, and gave it a quiet kiss—because I heard he was a poet." In the same vein she tells how Keats looked as he leaned against the organ, listening with rapt attention to her father's music. Once she tip-toed to look over the parlor blinds to see Shelley pass, and was rewarded by a glimpse of "his seraph-like face, with its blue eyes, and aureoled by its golden hair."

Mrs. Cowden-Clarke was born in 1809. Her father was Vincent Navello, the musician, and her brother Alfred was the founder of the famous music house, which still exists in London, with a Novello in its firm name. The man who became her husband was Charles Cowden-Clarke—dead now for twenty years—who in his day was quite a noted member of the group that centered about Leigh Hunt, Keats, Shelley, and Landor. Though he was much older than Miss Novello, the married life of the two was an idyl. She naively tells how she determined not to follow Charlotte Grandison's example of hesitation at saying the word "obey" in the marriage ceremony.

Her opportunities for meeting noted persons—literary, musical, and theatrical—were exceptional. Musicians flocked to her father's house and to the little front parlor where her brother Alfred started his music business. Her husband consorted with the chief literary men of the day, and won distinction as a Shakspeare lecturer and an author. He was also dramatic critic for leading papers, and thus Mrs. Cowden-Clarke met Fanny and Charles Kemble, Kean, and the rest of the stage notables of that day. She is herself an exceptionally good dramatic critic.

Mrs. Cowden-Clarke is an author several times over, her chief work being the "Concordance of Shakspeare," on which she spent sixteen years. She also speaks with pride of having been engaged by the Appletons of New York to edit their edition of Shakspeare, a fact which made her "the first (and, as yet, only) woman editor of our great poet."

The author's recollections go back to a childhood excursion down the Thames on one of the earliest steamboats, called a Margate Hoy, when she heard a man in a wherry bawl derisively, "I say! bile up yer kittle!" She took lessons in Latin from "dear, kind Mary Lamb," and was a favorite with Charles Lamb. She was brought into frequent companionship with "that super-excellent critic, William Hazlitt." She was a great admirer of Douglas Jerrold, and says hardly a greater mistake could be made than to attribute bitterness or ill-nature to his sharp sarcasms. But he was lightning at retort.

"The words that excited his reprisals had scarcely issued from the mouth of him who spoke them when out sprang Jerrold's reply. To the man who said, 'Ah, Lamartine and I row in the same boat,' the answer, 'Not with the same scull, though,' was given without an instant's pause."

Of Kean the actor she has several anecdotes. Once Liston laid a wager with the imperturbable Kean that he could make him laugh on the stage. When Kean was playing "Rolla," a procession of veiled Virgins of the Sun had to pass before him. "The first virgin as she entered suddenly raised her veil, confronted Kean with the irresistible visage of Liston, and the wager was won, for Kean went off into an uncontrollable fit of laughter."

All the members of the Novello family were musical, and many a memorable musical evening took place at their home.

"Just after Malibran's marriage with De Beriot they both came to a party at our house. De Beriot played in a string quartet by Haydn, his tone being one of the loveliest I ever heard on the violin—not excepting that of Paganini. Then Malibran sang songs in lavish succession. When she had concluded, amid a rave of admiring plaudits, she ran up to one among the heartiest of the applauding guests, Felix Mendelssohn, and said: 'Now, Mr. Mendelssohn, you must play for me.' He let her lead him to the pianoforte, where he dashed into a wonderfully impulsive extempore—masterly, musician-like, full of gusto. In this marvelous improvisation he introduced the several pieces Malibran had just sung, the four subjects blended together in elaborate counterpoint. When Mendelssohn had finished playing, my father turned to a friend and said: 'He has done some things that seems to me impossible even after I have heard them done.'"

Mrs. Cowden-Clarke tells of how she took the old woman rôles in Charles Dickens' amateur theatrical company, and found the novelist delightful in this aspect. She retails an anecdote of Landseer's having drawn a horse with one hand and a dog with the other, both at the same time, and of the great animal painter's having once been greeted by the King of Portugal with: "I am very glad to see you, Mr. Landseer, for I am very fond of beasts." She has something to say of Mrs. Gaskell and of the great popularity of "Mary Barton." Richard Cobden and his wife were intimate friends of the author and her husband.

It is a wholesome, simple volume, charming in its superficiality, a worthy contribution to the biographical abundance that marks the present publication season.

Fresh Literary Notes.

Whistler is preparing a new and enlarged edition of "The Gentle Art of Making Enemies."

G. A. Henty, the prolific and popular juvenile romancer, still clings to the three-volume idea, as exemplified in the form of his latest novel, "The Queen's Cup."

In the Hypnotic Magazine for November Thomas Jay Hudson, author of "The Law of Psychic Phenomena," explains how he became convinced of the truth of telepathy.

The Academy of London has passed into the hands of a new proprietor. Mr. Cotton, the former editor, is superseded by Lewis Hind, formerly editor of the Pall Mall Budget.

Mrs. Mabel Osgood Wright's "Tommy-Anne," with its bird and beast characters, has met with favor among the children, and a second edition is quickly following the first.

Edward W. Bok, editor and part owner of the Ladies' Home Journal, has made assurance doubly sure by marrying Mary Louise Curtis, daughter of Cyrus H. K. Curtis, the chief proprietor of that publication.

One of Marie Corelli's friends describes her as "petite, and extremely fair, with deep set gray eyes, and with soft, fluffy hair that curls around her head." Those who have read her recent scolding novels will also be pleased to learn that "her voice is sweet and silvery, and she is bright and joyous in manner."

FACTIONS IN THE SENATE

SILVER MEN AND INDEPENDENTS MAY HAMPER THE MAJORITY.

Republicans Make a Net Gain by the Elections and with the Aid of Two of the Bolters Will Have Absolute Control—Gossip About Pettigrew, Cannon, and Others—Moderate Silver Legislation Possible — Compromises Expected.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Leaders of both parties are watching with intense interest the returns from the different States bearing on the composition of the next Senate, for on that body will depend all the efforts of Maj. McKinley and his advisers to better the financial condition of the country. The House of Representatives for two years from March 4 will be practically the same as now. Speaker Reed will be in the chair, and the great working committees which make up the leadership of the House are almost untouched. President McKinley will have the support of the popular branch of Congress without hesitation. The Senate, however, will be split up into factions about as at present.

From present advices the caucus rolls of the Upper House will show forty-four Republicans, thirty-four Democrats, and thirteen Independents. Last spring the Senate's nominal membership was forty-four Republicans, thirty-nine Democrats, six Independents, and a vacant seat from Delaware. As a result of the adoption of the gold standard platform at St. Louis Teller of Colorado, Dubois of Idaho, Mantle of Montana, Cannon of Utah, Squire of Washington, and Pettigrew of South Dakota openly deserted the Republican party. The sextet supported Bryan on the financial issue only, each declaring himself a strong protectionist, and therefore they were classed as Independents. Just before election, therefore, the Senate stood thirty-eight Republicans, thirty-nine Democrats, twelve Independents, and one vacancy.

As the result of the voting the Republicans gained and the Democrats lost a Senator in Illinois, Indiana, Maryland, Ohio, New York, Wisconsin, and Kentucky. The Republicans lost the Legislatures in Utah and North Carolina, and the Democrats gained a seat from Utah and the vacancy from Delaware. The independent faction probably gained a Senator in North Carolina. It is generally conceded that the next Senator from that State will be to all intents and purposes an Independent, as the Populist combination can dictate terms to the Republicans. As to Kentucky, it is assumed that the Republicans will reconcile their differences and elect one of their own number.

Net Gain to Republicans.

On this basis, therefore, the elections made a net gain to the straight Republicans of five seats, a net loss to the Democrats of five seats, and a possible gain to the nondescript faction of one Senator. The caucus rolls, therefore, are likely to show when the Senate meets in special session, forty-four Republicans, thirty-four Democrats, and thirteen Independents. Though deprived of nominal control, the advantage is all with the Republicans.

The independent Senators hold the balance of power. Of the thirteen, Butler of North Carolina, Allen of Nebraska, the successors of Kyle of South Dakota and Peffer of Kansas, and the new Senator from Washington will probably be out-and-out Populists. The North Carolina man may nominally be a Republican, but beyond that it is unsafe to predict. Stewart and Jones of Nevada left the Republicans two years ago, and at all times are uncertain quantities. They generally refuse to be paired and are as often absent as present when there is a vote. The other independents, so-called—Teller of Colorado, Cannon of Utah, Dubois of Idaho, Mantle of Montana, and Pettigrew of South Dakota—are all protectionists who were in good standing in the Republican party until this year. Aside from the financial question, they would probably act with the Republicans. Pettigrew is expected to make terms as soon as the first postoffice in South Dakota gets before the Senate. He's that kind of a man, and Dubois, Cannon, and Mantle generally keep pretty close tab on the offices. Teller is supposed to be above patronage. From the preliminary survey of the next Senate, therefore, it is evident that the Republicans will have a strong plurality at the start. They need to secure only two votes to control the Senate with the help of the Vice-President, and to get these they have a quintet of five ex-Republicans, any or all of whom may decide to act with their old associates on all party questions. The general opinion is that wherever the tariff and other party issues can be kept distinct the Republicans will be able to force through legislation, but the margins are so small that the new tariff bill will necessarily require to be handled with the utmost caution.

Financial Vote in Doubt.

On financial questions the results will probably be in doubt until there is a test vote. The Democratic Senators from Maryland, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Wisconsin, and several from Southern States will be for sound money. On the other hand, the Republican Senators from Montana, California, Colorado, Idaho, Wyoming, and Washington have hitherto acted with the silver men at times, and when party lines are so broken down, may slip under the canvas now and then. On a straight issue of unlimited free coinage at 16 to 1 the sound money men in the Senate are undoubtedly in the majority. On makeshifts and compromises like the coinage of the American product only coinage at a new ratio, or even coinage by the government on the lines of the Bland-Allison or the Sherman law, the Senate will probably show a silver majority. The aim of the Republican leaders will therefore be to divorce the tariff and revenue questions from silver as far as possible.

The Democrats can be depended on to fight any general tariff bill as a unit, and the silver Democrats will be pretty certain to attempt to load down all tariff measures with silver amendments, and thus force the Teller following to show their hands. From present appearances the next tariff bill will be a matter of compromise in many particulars. Whether any tariff bill at all is enacted depends largely on the attitude of Teller, Cannon, Dubois, or his successor, Mantle, and Pettigrew. They hold the balance of power, and no one knows it better than the quintet themselves.

SENATOR BUTLER STILL HOPEFUL.

Looks for the People's Party to Swallow Everything Else.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Senator Butler of North Carolina, Chairman of the Populist National committee, has gone home for a hunting trip before the meeting of Congress. Before leaving Washington he said he did not think the Populists and independent silver Senators would oppose tariff legislation for revenue only, provided the increase was upon certain articles.

"If there is not sufficient revenue to run the government," said Senator Butler, "some tariff legislation should be enacted at the coming session of Congress. There ought also to be a tariff on certain luxuries as well as upon raw materials. Congress would not be particular about which articles the duty is placed on, provided it is on such as are consumed by the rich, who pay no tax to support the government and who will never pay a tax to the government unless through tariff on luxuries or through an income tax.

"If the silver men were in control of Congress they would probably submit to the State Legislatures a proposition to restore the provision of the Constitution which the decision of the Supreme Court nullified.

"We're going to push our organization and keep it to the front. Four years from now there will be as big a revolt in the Republican party against McKinleyism as there was in the Democratic party against Clevelandism, and the men who leave the Republicans and who have been fighting the Democratic party all its life will naturally join the People's party before allying themselves with their opponents. The Democratic party is bigger today than it will be at the opening of the next campaign. While this is so the People's party will grow bigger.

"The hope of redeeming this country from Clevelandism and McKinleyism lies largely with the patriotic rank and file of the Republican party, who will, before 1900, join hands with the People's party. These, with the addition of the real and true Democrats, will clearly make a majority of the voters of the United States."

WILL NOT OPPOSE A TARIFF BILL.

Senator Morgan Says the Republicans May Pass One if They Wish.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—"If the Dingley tariff bill does not pass the Senate this winter," said Senator Morgan of Alabama, "it will be the fault of the Republicans. I will not oppose it, although I would not say I will vote for it. The bill is only a makeshift and the manufacturers of the East do not really want it. I do not expect to see it pass. It seems likely this will be a case of the engineer hoist by his own petard.

"Tariff legislation in the coming session depends upon whether the Republicans really desire to press the Dingley bill. I would like to see it presented to President Cleveland for his approval or disapproval. He might feel sufficiently grateful to Mr. McKinley for praising and upholding his financial policy to forgive the severe reproof which the Republicans administered to him at the St. Louis convention and to aid the Republicans now in getting through their Dingley bill.

"Further opposition to the Dingley bill by the silver Republicans I do anticipate."

ALLISON A STRONG PROBABILITY.

Why He May Be Chosen Secretary of the Treasury.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Free and unlimited coinage of Cabinet officers will continue from now until President McKinley is inaugurated, and the ratio of "mentions" to places will be larger than any official proportions between gold and silver. There are only eight Cabinet positions at the disposal of the President.

The usual process of constructing a Cabinet, so it is said by men who have been consulted hitherto, is to take the Secretary of State and Secretary of the Treasury as the joint foundation stone, their selection determining in a large measure the geographical location of the rest of the Cabinet. The Secretary of State is the premier of the administration and is generally supposed to hold peculiarly confidential relations with the President, though this is far from being an invariable rule. President Cleveland disregarded it altogether in the selection of Secretary Gresham and made the Secretary of War, Dan Lamont, his confidential man in the Cabinet.

The Secretary of the Treasury is likely to be the real keystone of the new Cabinet, and it is probable that his geographical location will influence the construction of the Cabinet more than anything else. There is good ground for the belief that Maj. McKinley would prefer to have a Western man at the head of the Treasury. This would dispose of the "Wall street influence" cry which was heard so generally in the West during the campaign. John Sherman, from his past achievements, would be the logical selection for the place, but the Ohio Senator is now in the seventies and he himself has said within the last few days that he did not feel equal to the responsibilities which would be carried about in the Treasury portfolio.

Those who say that Maj. McKinley's personal preferences as well as admitted good political policy point to the selection of a Western man believe that the place will be offered sooner or later to Senator Allison.

The Iowa Senator is the best tariff expert in Washington, if not in the country, and the administrative features of the McKinley bill were written by him, and these are the sections on which the Treasury Department administers the law. Allison was one of the few candidates who did not attack the McKinley forces openly before the convention, and the McKinley men recognized him as a legitimate favorite son. Besides all this, Senator Allison was a member of the Brussels conference, and his appointment would be an earnest of the desire of the administration to secure the international agreement to which the party pledged itself at St. Louis.

If the Treasury is to go to the East, Cornelius N. Bliss is generally recognized as the coming man. Platt will not fight his appointment and Bliss' services to the party date back through many hard fought political campaigns. More than all, Mr. Bliss has been President of the American Protective Tariff League, an organization which more nearly represents Maj. McKinley's personal tariff views than any other.

FORMAN NOT GOING ON THE BENCH.

William R. Morrison and Private Secretary Thurber Deny the Report.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—A story was current here today that ex-Representative Forman of Illinois had been called to Washington with a view to placing him upon the bench of the United States Court of Claims as the successor of the late Chief Justice Richardson. When the attention of Inter-State Commerce Commissioner Morrison was called to the story he replied:

"I do not think it likely there is anything to it. Mr. Forman is not willing to accept any position which may compel him to leave Illinois. It is true he has been called to Washington, but it is for the purpose of consultation upon an entirely different subject than the vacancy in the United States Court of Claims. That story I feel safe in denying, although I am not at liberty to tell why Mr. Forman has been summoned to Washington at this time."

It was also denied at the White House that Mr. Forman had been selected as the successor of Chief Justice Richardson, and Private Secretary Thurber declared his name had not been mentioned in such a connection. "Whoever gave a tip that Forman has been telegraphed for by the President," said Mr. Thurber, "is decidedly off in even making such a suggestion. A number of names have been mentioned for this vacancy, but I do not remember that Mr. Forman's name was among them. Within a quarter of an hour after it became known that Judge Richardson was dead an application was filed in behalf of a prominent politician and lawyer, and since that time the number of applicants is legion.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Probably there was not a more surprised man in the country today than ex-Congressman Forman when he read of his prospective appointment as Chief Justice of the Court of Claims. Mr. Forman had received a telegram telling him to come to Washington and left for the capital this evening. "The honor comes, if the report is correct, unsolicited," said Mr. Forman, "and is all the more appreciated on that account. I confess it is hard for me to believe that President Cleveland has selected me as a successor to the late Chief Justice Richardson."

VALUE OF THE ARMY IN PEACE.

Gen. Miles Discusses the Question of Protection to Labor and Property.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—In his annual report to the Secretary of War Maj.-Gen. Miles, commanding the army, says that fortunately during the year the army has been called upon only to a limited extent to act either against hostile Indians or against bodies of men engaged in violating the laws of the United States or international treaty obligations.

Gen. Miles says: "An unwise argument has been made against the construction of modern appliances of war, on the theory that it is a danger and a menace to the laboring classes. In some instances marked protests have been made against such a national policy. The arguments seem scarcely worthy of consideration; yet it is deemed proper to call attention to the fact that these national safeguards are in no sense a menace to any class of our citizens, not even to the humblest individual; but on the other hand they are a protection to the life, property, and welfare of all classes, from the highest to the lowest. They protect not only the commercial centers with their accumulations of public buildings and private dwellings, commerce and shipyards, but the factory, the foundry, the workshop, and also the savings banks and the cottages. In fact the destruction of our great commercial and manufacturing cities would be a national disaster far more serious and appalling to the great masses of the laboring population than it would be to any other class of our people."

SPANISH SWINDLING OPERATION.

Confidence Game with Victims in Illinois and Wisconsin.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—A Spanish confidence game that is being worked with success on Americans, notably in Wisconsin and Illinois, is exposed by United States Consul-General Bowen at Barcelona in a special report to the State Department. This is known as the "priest" swindle, and the characters always are an imaginary political prisoner in a Spanish jail, his little daughter about to be left helpless by his approaching demise, and a benevolent priest who is willing to care for the child and send or bring her to a relative in America. The latter is the victim of the plot. First he receives a letter from the prisoner, claiming to be his relative and praying him to care for his child. Then comes a letter from the priest announcing the prisoner's death, and stating that he will look after the child until money is sent to bring her to her alleged American relative. The latter sends the money, and is next informed by the priest that he and the girl have been arrested in France while on their way to the United States. That is the last heard of the swindlers.

Condition of the Treasury.

Today's statement of the condition of the Treasury shows: Available cash balance, $229,470,984; gold reserve, $121,532,482. The Treasury today lost $2,100 in gold coin and $5,000 in bars, which leaves the true amount of the reserve $122,626,482. The net gain in gold today was $575,000.

MANY CALL ON M'KINLEY.

PRESIDENT-ELECT SIZES UP CABINET TIMBER.

Chairman Roberts Brings Encouraging News from Kentucky and Outlines the Senatorial Situation in That State—Senator Sherman Talks on the Necessity for Tariff Revision and Says He Does Not Anticipate Obstructive Legislation.

Canton, O., Nov. 11.—President-elect McKinley passed the day quietly at his North Market street home, receiving and entertaining the usual number of visitors and giving such time as is permitted him to the accumulated and still accumulating correspondence. His mother and his sister Helen went to the house early this morning to be with Mrs. McKinley during the day.

One of the morning callers was Sam Roberts, State Chairman of Kentucky. Mr. Roberts thinks there is now little probability of a contest on the Electoral vote of that State. It is now practically conceded, he says, that the Republicans have succeeded by a plurality of at least 444.

Ex-Senator John J. Ingalls, in a letter to Maj. McKinley, says:

"I am very much gratified to know that my prediction at Minneapolis has come to pass. My congratulations are late, but they are cordial and sincere. They are tempered by profound regret and disappointment at the result in Kansas, but we did the best we could."

J. J. De Haven of San Francisco writes: "It was your personal popularity, the manner in which you conducted your campaign, and the dignified and patriotic character of your speeches which contributed largely to the Republican victory in our State. The people have confidence in you."

Dinner was served late at the McKinley home tonight. Scarcely had the President-elect entered the library after dinner than the mail carriers of Canton were announced. They shook hands with their distinguished fellow-townsman. He told them that when he secured free mail delivery for Canton fourteen years ago this little city only required five mail carriers, and they told him the enormous mail since the Presidential campaign opened had kept them and as many more employés at the new postoffice building hustling for months past.

Their few minutes' visit had no sooner ended than a committee from the Knights Templar of Canton, headed by General Superintendent Kennedy of the Cleveland, Canton and Southern railway called. Maj. McKinley said he supposed Mr. Kennedy was resting easier since the Canton excursion business had ended. Spokesman Kennedy said the Eastern stockholders of his road were much gratified at the enormous business done, but he had come tonight to ask the honor for the Canton Knights Templar of escorting their comrade to Washington for the inaugural ceremonies. It was explained that a committee for several hundred Canton business-men had called with a similar tender of services. The Eighth Regiment, O. N. G., has also asked for the honor, as well as the Cleveland Troop, the Fourteenth Regiment of Columbus, where Maj. McKinley lived during four years of his Gubernatorial term, and many other similar organizations. One notable body aspiring for the distinction is the oldest Republican club in California, which wired offering to come from San Francisco and do escort duty.

Shortly after noon Maj. McKinley took a drive in his carriage. He was accompanied by Secretary of State Samuel M. Taylor of Columbus, Samuel J. Roberts, Chairman of the Kentucky State Republican committee, and Mr. Walter Chance of Philadelphia. At lunch he entertained Robert P. Porter of Cleveland, who was Superintendent of the census of 1890.

To a reporter this afternoon Chairman Roberts said: "We have Kentucky sure for Maj. McKinley. We also have a majority of two on joint ballot in the General Assembly which will elect a straight-out Republican United States Senator. Had there been necessity for coalition between the Republicans and sound money Democrats there would have been a strong movement for Secretary Carlisle. As it is, however, there are a number of prominent Republicans whose friends are urging them to stand. These are Gov. Bradley, Dr. W. G. Hunter, Congressman from the Third District; John W. Yerkes, St. John Boyle, A. E. Wilson, Judge W. H. Holt, Judge George Denny, and State Senator Deboe are also mentioned as Senatorial possibilities."

SENATOR SHERMAN ON THE OUTLOOK

He Thinks Silver Senators Will Not Obstruct Tariff Legislation.

New York, Nov. 11.—Senator John Sherman of Ohio, who is at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, talked freely today about the outlook for legislation in the next Congress.

"It will be necessary to pass a tariff measure at once," he said. "The Dingley bill, with some changes, will do for the present. The Democrats made a great mistake in not permitting that bill to pass the last Congress. It was only a temporary measure intended to raise the revenue that the government absolutely needed, and if the Democrats had let it go through there would have been no necessity for bond issues, and the Democratic administration would have escaped a great deal of the censure and criticism that were heaped upon it.

"I doubt," the Senator continued, "if the Democrats in the Senate will oppose the bill. I understand all the silver men except Teller and Dubois are opposed to a policy of obstruction. If the Dingley bill is passed at the coming session of Congress there will be no necessity for an extraordinary session after March 4. Considering everything, I think that the outlook for the passage of the bill is bright.

"It is doubtful if the Republicans will have a majority in the Senate. Nobody can tell yet whether Republicans or Democrats will go to the Senate from Kentucky and North Carolina. Until these States elect their Senators it will be impossible to say which side will have a majority."

The Senator was asked if he knew anything about the make-up of President McKinley's Cabinet, and if he might take the Treasury portfolio again.

"McKinley is the only man who knows anything about the Cabinet yet, and I have given no thought to Cabinet matters," he replied.

READY FOR THE SENATORIAL FIGHT

Summary of the Biennial Message of Gov. Oates of Alabama.

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—The organization of the General Assembly was perfected today by the election of the following officers: President of the Senate, A. D. Sayre; Secretary, John Porter; Speaker of the House, Newton N. Clements; Clerk, Massie Wilson.

Gov. Oates' biennial message was presented today. It recommends that the State election law be repealed and a better one passed; that State elections be held every four years instead of two; that the county convict system be abolished; that a tax be laid expressly for the support of the public schools; that the Supreme Court be elected for ten years; that the poll tax be increased to $2; that building and loan associations be required to pay taxes on all their assets; that a Governor's mansion be erected; and that a State Historian should be employed.

The United States Senatorship fight promises to be close and hot. Gov. Oates and Gen. Pettus are the favorites, but Congressman Bankhead is a strong second choice. Senator Pugh is not showing much strength. The caucuses will be held on Friday.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 11.—Pending action of the caucus, the Joint Assembly today cast a formal scattering ballot for the Senatorship, which was without result.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 11.—Notices of contest have been filed in the cases of all the Republicans elected to fill vacancies in the Legislature. This is understood to have been done in the interest of Senator Blackburn.

TO SET THE SILVER PACE FOR 1900.

Denver Reception to Bryan Is to Be a Big Affair.

Denver, Colo., Nov. 11.—Citizens of Denver and of Colorado will extend such a reception to William Jennings Bryan on Nov. 24 as has been equaled in the West only by the remarkable demonstration signalizing the return of Senator Teller from the St. Louis convention. It is purposed to invite men of national reputation and standing, and to hold in Denver a conference which will set the pace and start the silver forces at work for the campaign of 1900. The general management of the affair is in the hands of a committee of ten, consisting of the Mayor of the city, the President of the Chamber of Commerce, and two members of each of the political parties—Populist, National Silver party, Democratic and Silver Republican.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 11.—Saturday afternoon William J. Bryan will deliver two lectures at the Funke Opera-House in this city. These are supposed to be his opening guns in the four-year campaign for "bimetallism" which Mr. Bryan has promised to inaugurate.

BOOM FOR SAMUEL W. ALLERTON.

Resolution Indorsing Him for Agricultural Portfolio Introduced.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 11.—The Farmers' National Congress at its session today, by resolution, requested ex-President Harrison to address the body.

The President of the congress, referring to a bill pending in the United States Senate providing for an industrial commission, said that action should be taken by the farmers' convention looking to the appointment of one, or perhaps two, of the five members of the commission from the membership of this congress. The session was largely devoted to resolutions, one of the most important being the following, which was referred to the Committee on Resolutions:

Suggesting S. W. Allerton of Illinois as Secretary of Agriculture.

Other resolutions were:

Requesting the Congress of the United States to appoint a corps of civil engineers to examine and report as to the practicability of constructing a ship canal connecting the Atlantic with the great lakes by way of rivers and the Gulf of Mexico; that it is the sense of this congress that women should be given the right of suffrage; that the Congress of the United States should take active measures to restrict undesirable immigration, discountenance class legislation, and discourage sectionalism.

W. H. Hoffman of Illinois introduced a resolution to the effect that inasmuch as the Supreme Court of the United States had decided that the tax on incomes is unconstitutional, and, whereas, the farmer's income includes all the products of the farm, all farm products should be exempt from assessment or taxation.

The committee on locating the next meeting of the congress reported in favor of St. Paul, Minn., and suggested that it be held at least two months earlier in the year than the present congress.

J. Adam Bede of St. Paul said he was a Democrat, but he knew that silver could only be mined by the wealthy, by great corporations, and that they alone could get any profit out of it. A resolution with a decided silver ring, introduced by Mr. Offut of Indiana, was substituted by the following resolutions by the Committee on Resolutions and adopted, against the warm protest of Mr. Offut:

Whereas, The general concensus of opinion of the people of the United States is that gold and silver coin on a just parity of value should be equally money of ultimate redemption without limit, in which this Farmers' National Congress concurs, but differences of opinion exist as to the methods by which this policy can be secured; and

Whereas, The recent election resulted in favor of bimetallism by international commercial nations; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Farmers' National Congress urgently requests the incoming administration of the National Government to speedily adopt all practicable methods to obtain the concurrence of a sufficient number of nations to secure international bimetallism with the unlimited coinage of gold and silver as equal money of ultimate redemption, and thereby to restore bimetallic prices for the world's commerce.

Mr. Lawrence, Chairman of the committee, said the members of the committee, with one exception, were of the opinion that the resolutions expressed the opinion of a vast majority of the people of the United States, and that the substitute was a proper one.

During the afternoon the congress was addressed by Gen. Roy Stone of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, and he delivered a strong and telling speech.

Dr. Satello, representing the Republic of Venezuela, made a brief address, in which he said that Venezuela is with America and expressed a true fidelity to the interests of the United States. Three hearty cheers were given for Venezuela and the sister republics of Pan-America at the conclusion of the address.

The following committee was appointed to present to Congress the memorial of the Farmers' Congress under course of preparation: Messrs. B. F. Clayton of Iowa, J. D. Clardy of Kentucky, W. B. Powell of Pennsylvania, and William Lawrence of Ohio.

PROBABLE CONTEST IN KENTUCKY.

Secretary Richardson Charges Fraud and Wants Money to Fight It.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 11.—Secretary Richardson of the Democratic committee today gave to the Associated Press the following: "The Republicans of Kentucky claim the State by about 500 votes. This result has been accomplished by one of the most gigantic frauds in the history of politics. If a proper contest can be made the State can be secured to Bryan and Democracy. To make this contest it is necessary to raise a fund for the employment of counsel, the taking of proof, and the general expenses of the contest. This committee is now without funds. In fact, the campaign was made practically without money, and the only means for raising funds is by subscription. This committee appeals to all Democrats interested in saving the State to Bryan and Democracy to send such amounts as they feel able to subscribe."

SAYS HARRISON WILL NOT ACCEPT.

Ex-Attorney-General Miller Speaks for the Ex-President.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 11.—W. H. H. Miller, ex-Attorney-General, of Indianapolis, was in St. Louis today. He was asked if he thought ex-President Harrison would accept a position in President-elect McKinley's Cabinet. He replied that he knew Gen. Harrison would not accept a portfolio under any circumstances. He said he knew this from personal conversations he had had with the ex-President.

Complete Vote of New Hampshire.

Concord, N. H., Nov. 11.—Ellsworth, the last polling place in New Hampshire to be heard from, has made its election returns. The figures complete the State vote, which gives McKinley 55,671, Bryan 21,096; plurality for McKinley, 34,575. For Governor Ramsdell, Republican, 49,092; Kent, Democrat, 28,090; Ramsdell's plurality, 21,002.

Official Vote of Virginia.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—With ten counties out of 100 to report the official vote cast in Virginia and reported to the Secretary of the Commonwealth is as follows: Bryan, 140,190; McKinley, 124,233; Palmer, 1,988; Levering, 2,322. The vote in the entire State in 1892 was: Cleveland, 163,977; Harrison, 113,326; Weaver, 12,275.

Fusionist Congressman Wins.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 11.—Official returns from all the counties in the Seventh Congressional District show that Castle, Democrat and Populist, has been elected over Bowers, Republican, by 90 votes.

DEATH OF H. B. BYERS, THE BARITONE.

He Had Sung in the Church of the Messiah, the South Congregational, and Sinai Temple.

Henry Booth Byers, the baritone, died yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Baptist Hospital. The funeral will take place from the family residence, No. 228 Oakwood boulevard, at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. Byers was born in Cooperstown, Pa., on March 4, 1871. He finished his studies in Chicago, and eventually filled several church positions, singing at the Church of the Messiah, the South Congregational Church, and Sinai Temple.

PLAZA AND RENFOST CHANGE HANDS.

Transfers Amount Merely to a Swapping of Ownership and Both Hotels Will Continue as Heretofore.

Two transfers of property involving an interchange of ownership in two Chicago hotels were entered yesterday as follows:

Plaza Hotel company to Emily B. Hopkins, $750,000.

Emily B. Hopkins (Renfost Hotel) to Evangeline K. Warren, $300,000.

KNIGHTS ARE IN POLITICS

MASTER WORKMAN SOVEREIGN ADDRESSES THE CONVENTION.

Bitter Attack Upon Capital and the Elements That Defeated Repudiation and the Silver Movement—Knights of Labor the Only Labor Organization That Stood for Bryan and Free Coinage — Proposed Amendments — New York Jury Methods.

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 11.—The General Assembly Knights of Labor went into secret session immediately after convening today. General Master Workman Sovereign's report was read, followed by the report of General Secretary and Treasurer Hayes.

Sovereign in his annual report said: "After a struggle of twenty-seven years against the evils of aggregated wealth by our order we are confronted with more serious problems affecting the rights and liberties of the industrial masses than ever before. Not only have the idle speculating classes demonstrated their ability to dominate productive enterprises and accumulate wealth of toiling millions, but they have demonstrated their power to coerce wage-earners and mortgaged farmers with threats of discharge and foreclosure into submission to their will. The autocratic holders of idle money have subverted the principle of free government by forcing political service from the poor as the tenure of employment.

"Laboring men can combat a falsehood and bid defiance to traitors from their own ranks, but when a depraved monster of corporate rapacity steals into their homes and threatens them with discharge and persecution because of their political convictions they sacrifice their liberties in consideration of food and shelter for their helpless wives and innocent children. The struggle just passed has demonstrated that pecuniary dependence is political slavery.

Position in Politics.

"In the struggle just passed the Knights of Labor proved itself to be the only labor organization that stood like an iron wall before the fire of the organized money power of the two continents. Every general officer and every district and local assembly of our order spurned every effort of bribery and scorned every threat of the money king."

Mr. Sovereign added that, except Eugene V. Debs, the heads of the labor organizations, including the Federation of Labor, gave no material aid in the recent struggle.

The Master Workman says the Knights should abandon Utopian plans and center their efforts as follows:

"I would so change and abbreviate our present test of membership as to center our immediate demands upon an equitable income tax, the free and unlimited coinage of silver at present legal ratio, the payments of all government bonds according to present contract, and the issue of all the money of the country. I would make positive and unequivocal declarations against government by injunction, increase of the standing army, the payment of bonded debt in gold alone, the issues of bonds in times of peace, and the issue of circulating notes by banking corporations."

Hayes Reviews the Order.

The annual report of Secretary-Treasurer J. W. Hayes opens with a reference to what the official named terms "attacks of a most villainous character" on the general officers of the order, "by reason of the just stand taken by them in refusing to follow a small clique of men who are familiarly known as the 'New York Triangle' of the Socialistic Labor party to get control of the machinery of the Knights of Labor for the dissemination of their doctrines."

The so-called triangle, according to Mr. Hayes, consists of Daniel De Leon, Lucien Sanial, and Ernst Rohn.

Mr. Hayes complains that although the laws of the order prescribe that working cards, receipt books, and other supplies for the local and district assemblies shall come through the General Assembly, the receipts from those sources amounted to only $2,437. Printing for the National Silver committee brought into the treasury $1,700; for the Democratic Congressional committee, $5,000; and for the Illinois Democratic State committee, $650.

Mr. Hayes recommends that the brewing industry be thoroughly organized into the order of the Knights of Labor by the district assemblies in whose jurisdiction the business is located; that all locals so organized be attached to the district assemblies organizing them; that the general organization render all possible assistance to districts doing this work; and that all organizers be instructed not to admit to membership any persons who owe their first allegiance to the National Brewers' Union.

Proposed Amendments.

Among the amendments proposed are these: Making the per capita tax to the General Assembly three cents instead of six cents; to so amend the constitution as to abolish the office and the title of the General Executive Board, and thereby place the entire supervision of the order in the hands of the General Master Workman, General Worthy Foreman, General Secretary and Treasurer, the elective officers of the General Assembly, subject to the approval by vote of the representatives of the General Assembly; to so amend the various articles and sections of the constitution as to make the decision of appeals to the next highest authority governing on court cases, or points of law, as the decision final; to amend initiation ceremonies by shortening the same; to give to District Assembly 253, Knights of Labor Building Contractors, the absolute authority and right to organize the building trade into locals, to be attached to said districts in a radius of twenty-five miles from the general postoffice in New York City.

Executive Board Conclusions.

At the adjournment of the session this afternoon the following conclusions of the Executive Board were given to the Associated Press:

"At last the time has come when the lines of battle are fairly drawn between the laborers of America on the one hand and their implacable enemies—the money kings and their minions—on the other. Although a complete victory for the people was not won in this election, yet immense gains have been made. Six millions of American voters have arrayed themselves permanently under the banner of principles so long upheld by Knights of Labor. At least 2,000,000 more would have done likewise but for the forces of money and coercion used in this campaign by the party of the plutocracy.

"The lack of organization among the toilers is a grave menace to the republic. Not 5 per cent of the working people of the United States are organized. It is imperative that something must be done to organize them more rapidly than they have ever been organized in the past. What shall it be?

"We would suggest first that we must make it clear to the laboring people that it is to their interest in every sense of the word to become good members of the Knights of Labor.

"We must make it clear to the employers that it will not be injurious to their best interests if their employés are permitted and encouraged to join our order.

"We must make it clear beyond question that every man and woman who is a member of our order will be safer and better protected in their rights than those who are not members.

"We must make the employer understand that if he employs Knights of Labor he will not be placed at any disadvantage with his competitor who employs no Knights of Labor or is at open warfare with the order.

"Hasty and ill-advised strikes should be avoided as much as possible; every strike and lockout is incipient civil war. One is an attack of the employer on the employed and the other is an attack of the employé on the employer. These attacks and counter attacks often develop into civil war, and as one blow brings on another we can never foretell what the final outcome of some of these struggles may be. The plutocracy is seeking an excuse to greatly increase the standing army. The petty violence connected with the strikes and lockouts is their most plausible excuse now. Let us not play into their hands. We should teach the laboring people to cease to be rebellious slaves and to realize their real position, that of the head masters and rulers of the republic through the ballot."

New York, Nov. 11.—The World this morning says: Knights of Labor and the American Federation of Labor, through their officers, have demanded a revision of the lists from which the grand jurors of the county are selected. The labor organizations allege that too many capitalists and too few workingmen are on the lists to insure justice.

TRIBUNE DOLL DISTRIBUTION.

Additions to THE TRIBUNE doll fund received yesterday placed the total safely beyond the $200 mark, and the contributors sent with their money their most hearty commendation of the plan for Christmas day.

The fund now stands as follows:

Previously acknowledged	$196.50	Geo. Birkhoff Jr.	$ 2.00
Edgar M. Snow & Co.	5.00	Anon.	.50
Campbell Investment Co.	5.00	Total	$209.00

Offers to dress dolls were received as follows:

Mrs. J. D. Suydam, Oak Park	12
Annie Fleishman, No. 4504 Dearborn street	6

Contributors to the fund last year and those who assisted in the distribution were given admission tickets to Battery D with the compliments of THE TRIBUNE. All the grown folks present enjoyed the event as much as the little ones who received their dolls. The excellent program, the happy faces of the children, and the Christmas joy brought to the poor little girls made the occasion one never to be forgotten. Several girls from the charitable institutions of the city were given happy homes by kind people who were interested in the doll distribution. One little tot, who found a permanent home in a family in this city through the distribution, sat in the gallery with her new-found friends during the exercises and watched with beaming face the joy of her former associates.

Miss E. T. Colburn, Superintendent of the Home for the Friendless, is delighted that THE TRIBUNE will repeat the doll distribution of last year.

"Our children were made very happy last Christmas," said Miss Colburn yesterday. "They not only enjoyed the afternoon, but the dolls they brought home made them doubly happy. Even the sick girls who could not attend the exercises were kindly remembered by THE TRIBUNE. The plan is splendid, and deserves large support."

George Birkhoff Jr. said: "The plan of THE TRIBUNE to distribute dolls to the poor girls on Christmas certainly is a most commendable one, and worthy a generous support."

With his contribution to the fund Edgar M. Snow said: "I am delighted to assist in the scheme, and think it is most commendable."

Girls who have many dollies at home and wish to make some other little girl who has no dollie happy on Christmas day can do so by sending a contribution to the fund. Last year little boys as well as girls saved up pennies for the fund, and, had they been able to see the resulting happiness of others less fortunate than they, they would have been amply repaid. Many of the little contributors sent dollies to be given to the poor children, and assisted in this way in swelling the number of little unfortunates who were given a merry Christmas. People who bought dolls for the girls at home ordered one sent to the doll fund, and in this way helped to furnish the 3,200 dolls which were given away.

Address all contributions, whether cash, dolls, or offers of assistance, to the "Doll Fund," care of THE TRIBUNE.

MRS. CASTLE BETTER THAN EXPECTED

Her Husband Rejoices Over Her Release from Prison—Grateful for the Kind Treatment Accorded Her.

[SPECIAL CABLE BY JULIAN RALPH.]

London, Nov. 11.—[Copyright, 1896, by the New York Journal.]—Mr. Castle was on hand at Wormwood Scrubbs Prison some little time before 1 o'clock yesterday to receive his wife, who was released from the infirmary and made a free woman at that hour. He took with him to meet his wife the English nurse who attended her from the time she was released on bail until she was taken to the prison hospital last week. She will remain in attendance on Mrs. Castle until she leaves England for home.

The meeting between husband and wife was naturally affecting. They drove at once to their boarding-house in the northern suburbs of London, where they went after their release on bail, and where Mr. Castle has since been living. I had an interview with Mr. Castle tonight. I never saw such a change in a man as in him, compared with the time I last saw him, a few days ago, when in the greatest depth of his trouble. He was simply overflowing with happiness, and seemed scarce able to contain himself.

"This is, I assure you, the happiest day of all my life," he said, and his whole manner well bore out his averment. "Mrs. Castle was in a very much better state of health than I had expected to find her, and this I attribute to the remarkably great kindness shown to her by every one in Wormwood Scrubbs Prison, by the Governor, doctors, nurses, and every one else. I cannot speak too highly of the kindness shown my wife which from all she says was beyond all praise. They seemed to fully appreciate her situation and the conditions of her health that had led up to it, and they showed her wonderful consideration and courtesy and of course she was in the infirmary and in charge of two nurses and in every way treated as little like a prisoner as possible. Except for the fact of being under detention she was as well treated as she could have been anywhere. I wish to speak most strongly of this fact. Though so much better than expected, Mrs. Castle is still quite prostrated and in a very weak and nervous condition. I intend taking her from London in a day or so if she is well enough and going into the country somewhere in England for a few days to give her opportunity to recuperate and gain strength to stand the voyage home. I hope to sail for home with her in about a week from now, but my arrangements are yet to be made."

UNION PACIFIC EXPRESS IS WRECKED.

Several Persons Injured, but None Fatally, by the Derailment of a Train in Nebraska.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 11.—A serious accident occurred on the main line of the Union Pacific railway at 11 a. m. today between Roscoe and Ogalalla, in Nebraska. Evidence is conflicting as to the cause of the accident, some stating it was due to broken rails and others to spreading of rails.

Five cars left the track, including two Pacific coast tourist sleepers, one chair car, and two Pullmans. Twelve or fifteen persons were injured, the following seriously:

The Injured.

Bradshaw, Mrs. Emma, of Sheridan, Mont.; right side of head bruised, collar bone broken, and side injured.

Bristol, A. W., Cheyenne; scalp wound.

McCandach, James, Grand Island, Neb.; scalp wound and back injured.

Meyer, Charles L., New York; representing the Cripple Creek Mining Syndicate; right knee bruised and sprained.

Pierce, L. D., conductor, North Platte; face, elbow, and right hip badly cut and bruised.

Thomas, Mrs. Emma, en route from England to Butte, Mont.; right side of head bruised, collar bone broken, and side injured.

No one was killed and those who were injured are expected to recover.

The tourist cars stand on end against each other, one on one side of the track and the other on the other side, making an "A" across the track.

The first Pullman took fire, but the flames were soon extinguished.

SALE OF EDSON KEITH & CO. STOCK.

Great Crowd of Buyers Representing Chicago and Foreign Houses in Attendance on the Auction.

More than 300 buyers representing Chicago houses as well as city and country merchants from various parts of the union assembled at the store of Edson Keith & Co. yesterday morning to bid upon a stock of $200,000 worth of dry goods and notions, which was advertised to be sold under the hammer. Probably $60,000 was realized by the first day's business. The auction will probably last through the week. All the purchases were made through agents, who were careful not to betray the identity of the buyers.

DRAG OFF LUCY PARSONS.

POLICE INTERRUPT IN THE MIDST OF AN INCENDIARY TIRADE.

Relict of the Executed Anarchist is Removed from the Twelfth Street Turner Hall's Stage After Having Maddened an Assemblage Gathered in Memory of the Woman's Husband and His Companions in the Haymarket Bomb-Throwing Tragedy.

"You hideous murderers! I hurl it in your teeth! You, Grinnell! You, Gary! You, Oglesby, and your hideous gang of police spies——"

Lucy Parsons was interrupted at this stage of her speech last night at the Twelfth Street Turner Hall by Capt. Wheeler of the Maxwell Street Police Station, who stepped forward from the wings and dragged her struggling from the stage. She escaped from him, went out of sight of the audience, and, dodging back of the flies again, appeared and shouted:

"You murderers! You shall not——"

Again Capt. Wheeler laid his hand upon her shoulder and pushed her from the stage. It was the climax of an exciting meeting, the ninth annual demonstration in commemoration of the hanging of August Spies, A. R. Parsons, Adolph Fischer, and George Engel.

John Most of New York was scheduled as the principal speaker and S. Oliver of Chicago was to hold the crowd until Most's arrival.

John Most Arrives Late.

The New York Anarchist was delayed by a late train and did not reach the hall until after 11 o'clock.

Singing societies and a German orchestra helped fill in the time, and finally it was noised about that Lucy Parsons, the wife of the executed Anarchist, was in the hall.

She was repeatedly called for by the crowd, and in response the Chairman finally asked her to come forward and speak. She repeated the speech made on a similar occasion one year ago last night, from the same stage, at which time Inspector Shea led her from the platform for attacking the police and State and city officials who were in office at the time of the conviction of her husband and his brother Anarchists.

She omitted the most incendiary parts of her speech, apparently saving them for the last. As she was about to finish, Most entered the hall. Then she stepped forward to the front of the stage, and with her hands poised in the air and a voice filled with intense passion she uttered the words which caused the police to interfere.

Lucy Parsons Maddens the Crowd.

For a moment after she was led from the stage it looked as if a serious outbreak would occur. People all over the hall rose up and pressed forward. Some one in the rear cried out:

"March on! Down with them! March on!"

Capt. Wheeler had seen to it that there were detectives scattered all through the audience. No less than three-score of them were present, though not a uniformed policeman was in sight.

The meeting was in an uproar for several minutes. No move was made by the police, though all were on the alert. There were hundreds of women in the audience, but they were not the kind that cry out or faint in exciting moments. No one can tell how narrowly the threatened outbreak was averted.

The Chairman of the meeting stepped forward and introduced Most. The sight of him on the platform had a quieting effect, and he used tact enough to hold the crowd until the storm of passion had subsided.

Prominent by Their Presence.

Prof. Graham Taylor was among those present. He occupied a box nearest the stage at the end of the gallery in the company of several friends. Mrs. Spies and her brother were also in the audience. The hall was decorated with banners and mottoes together with quotations from the last words of the Anarchists who were executed. A feature of the celebration was the singing of 500 members of German singing societies. T. O. Appel was Chairman.

S. Oliver, who was introduced as the first speaker, was forced to retire on account of illness before he had finished his address. He said nothing of an incendiary nature and confined himself principally to a eulogy on the dead Anarchists and a general attack upon capitalists and present forms of government. Intense enthusiasm marked the whole meeting and the rendering of patriotic airs, together with "Annie Laurie" and the "Marseillaise."

Most was accorded a hearty reception throughout and continued his remarks until after midnight. At different times he was called upon to explain phases of his political course, and in each case he gave a reply.

An audience of 400 or more Bohemian sympathizers with the executed Anarchists gathered in the Telocvicna Gymnasium, Ashland avenue and Eighteenth street, and gave attention to a program. The principal address was delivered by Frank Hlavacek.

There was no attempt made yesterday to celebrate at Waldheim Cemetery, where the Anarchists' resting-place is marked by a monument.

MEN OF TRADE IN SESSION

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MERCHANTS AND TRAVELERS MEETS.

Great Gathering of Dealers of the Middle and Far West at Medinah Temple—John V. Farwell Jr. Talks of the Business Situation—Recites the Lessons of Two Panics—Lyman J. Gage's Address—List of Those Who Attended.

Five hundred merchants gathered from the great States of the Middle and Far West, together with representatives of the leading wholesale houses in Chicago, heard questions of deep business moment discussed by men renowned in the commercial and financial world at Medinah Temple yesterday afternoon.

It was the second meeting of the National Association of Merchants and Travelers, which was organized last September and which has for its purpose the education of the business-men of the country in those broad principles which underlie commercial stability and growth.

At the September meeting addresses were delivered by H. N. Higinbotham and A. C. Bartlett. The speakers yesterday were Lyman J. Gage, John V. Farwell Jr., and Adolph Nathan.

All the addresses dealt with questions of moment to the business world.

Mr. Gage took occasion to refer to some of the lessons to be derived from the recent campaign. One which he especially called attention to was: "There is an irrepressible conflict between the forces which carry the burdens and responsibilities of our industrial affairs and irresponsible demagogues who seek power and influence by pandering to ignorance and inflaming passion."

Lesson of Conservatism.

Mr. Gage termed an encouraging lesson the coming together of the conservative forces of the country.

"Maine and Michigan were never so near as today," he said. "Minnesota and Kentucky have a new sense of kinship. Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, and Iowa, together constituting a great empire of the Middle West, have proved that principles are more powerful than party claims."

Mr. Gage also referred to Mr. Bryan as the "oratorical prodigy of Nebraska," as one who had given assurance "that four years more of popular miseducation is to succeed the hysterical appeals from which you and the whole country have so grievously suffered."

It was 4:30 o'clock before the exercises began. During the day the visitors were busy making purchases. Many orders conditional on McKinley's election were filled, and it seemed to be the consensus of opinion that a period of great business activity is at hand.

Adolph Nathan's Opening.

Adolph Nathan, after calling the meeting to order, spoke as follows:

"Members of the National Association of Merchants and Travelers and Invited Guests: On behalf of this association I greet you and bid you all a sincere and hearty welcome.

"The time has long gone by when a farmer, a mechanic, a professional man with capital, but without previous training and mental capacity, can enter the field of merchandising and succeed. The length of his business career can be measured by the length of his purse.

"With this fact in view, we believe that meeting at a central point like Chicago, in fall and spring, enabling merchants of this vast territory to meet in personal intercourse and interchange of their experiences and thoughts with one another, much mutual good for all may be accomplished.

"The great question we all desire to study and understand just now is the business situation. We have among us a man, not old in years, yet whose broad education and ample personal experience in the management of one of our largest and best known mercantile houses, eminently fits him to give us his opinion, which will, I am confident, merit your most careful consideration. I take great pleasure in introducing John V. Farwell Jr."

Address of John V. Farwell Jr.

Mr. Farwell spoke as follows:

"The business situation from a broad view depends on so many circumstances that we can never go into it minutely down to the last analysis. As we are immediately concerned with the United States and especially with the West, we will confine ourselves to the main features of the present as seen from the past and the probable future.

"We have been through what is called a panic. In 1893 we undoubtedly remember that another person of the same name made us a call. Although very like in effect, they proceeded from entirely different causes. The first was the result of a general financial spree in which every nerve and fibre of society was overstimulated, and lived on more stimulants and more speculation until, like the drunken man, it collapsed with a case of delirium tremens, in which all were frightened out of their senses, lost their material strength and confidence, and the result was called by political economy a panic.

"The last was the result not of overspeculation, for there has been very little since 1892, but of a gradually growing fear that the financial basis and monetary laws of the country were growing unsound. To follow the same metaphor, it was a sort of creeping paralysis, the kind that brings with it the terrible undefinable fear that the malady may go to the heart or brain. We had been trifling with nature's laws, and this disease had stricken us and was gradually growing worse.

Lessons of the Panics.

"We learned from the first panic the follies of extravagance and the virtues of thrift and economy. From the second to what a low physical condition we can be brought by the mere fear that a vital organ may be fatally affected. Fortunately, we took it out in fear and escaped the real malady, so that with this dread dispelled we are left with a sound body politic.

"I believe, therefore, that we are now as merchants of the West in the beginning of good times. Two panics over, their lessons learned, confidence restored, stocks of merchandise lower than ever before, mills opening up, new enterprises starting, hoarded money coming out, foreign money coming in, farm products enormous and rising to their normal level, the old home market opening, now is the time for all to remember the past only by its lessons, to step into line for the onward march, to reap the prizes of victory, which come to the courageous, the careful, the forceful man.

"Last August many of us believed that the great crops of the West and South would be the main dependence of the country during the hard times then on and coming. They proved our salvation in being the only product which brought to our shores the much needed gold.

Stocks at Low Ebb.

"Every merchant's stock is at the lowest point it has been for many years. I believe that by next spring trade will be normal again, consumption, sales, and profits will increase, new stores will be opened by experienced merchants who have only been waiting for a favorable opportunity, distributors will seek the goods instead of goods seeking the distributors, the old signs of a healthy organism will be more and more in evidence, and in a steady, confident way all classes and all sections will go forward.

"Let us remember that every one who indulges in luxury, pure speculation, or extravagance is helping to lay the foundation of another panic: that whoever within his circle of influence helps to spread unsound ideas as to the best credit conditions is inviting another monetary convulsion.

"On the contrary, careful expenditures and sound ideas radiating from every merchant who is a member of this association can probably prevent the recurrence of such a terrible national calamity as we have passed through during the last four years.

What Still Remains to Be Done.

"We are in a position where we have only laid the foundation. True, we have laid it firmly and broadly, but let us not mistake it for the whole building. No one knows exactly what that will be. On the same solid foundation architects can erect many different and perfect structures, and students of finance today can see in their imagination various plans for a complete system—in them all, probably, a more perfect banking organization with a more elastic bank currency as perhaps the next great national piece of the superstructure. Other plans, like the simplification of the national currency or its total retirement and many State and municipal reforms, can easily be suggested, but they do not come exactly in the scope of this subject. I mention them as a vital part of the present business situation. All is not now done. While we are much better off than we have been and the retrograde movement has been checked, the general sound and unassailable credit conditions which prevail in England cannot come to us, nor must they be expected, until some of these next steps are taken.

Question of the Future.

"With us the great question of the immediate future is to be the 'business situation.' Economic problems, and hard ones, too, are before us for solution. Some are national, some are State, and some are municipal. Each one must study the business situation from a broad point of view, and be ready to help formulate public opinion along the right lines. The future of all property interests and all labor interests, the very right of a republic to live, depend on a just and intelligent discussion and decision of these vital questions which cannot be side-tracked nor long postponed. Undoubtedly there are wrongs to be righted, but if so it must be done by the brains of the community, by patriotic, careful thinkers, and by conservative and just workingmen, and men of affairs, by the business-men of this association, and not by those of no reading or experience or honesty."

Nathan Introduces Gage.

At the conclusion of Mr. Farwell's speech Mr. Nathan introduced Lyman J. Gage, saying:

"We have in our midst a banker who not only is an astute financier but who, by much study, deep thought, joined to a clear, analytical mind, looks into and sees the deeper currents of individual, social, and national thought, motives, and tendencies. He is a humanitarian as well as a banker, and his long years, intimate connection and control of one of the largest and best known of the financial institutions of this country, of national and international fame, have won for himself that which few mortals attain—the implicit confidence of all who have the good fortune to know him.

"It is a source of pride and a great satisfaction to this association to have such a man, under its auspices, address you. He is too well known to need an introduction. However, as a matter of form, I take pleasure in presenting to you Lyman J. Gage, President of the First National Bank."

Address of Lyman J. Gage.

Mr. Gage spoke as follows:

"The uninitiated look upon the merchant and business-man with a curious mixture of admiration and envy. Of the cares, fears, and anxieties which everywhere and always beset him, they have little or no comprehension. Of the manifold perils which surround him they have the feeblest conception. Their reasoning about him is simple, direct, and conclusive. He is a merchant. He must be rich. He is therefore independent, may wear fine clothes, drink fine champagne, live luxuriously, enjoy the pleasures of travel, and experience all other material beatitudes.

"That he should be concerned about the crops, or scan with careful eye the conditions of general industry, or feel anxiety when labor falls into idleness, they do not understand. Of the narrow margin for profits when all costs and risks are settled—a margin which often sinks into a minus quantity instead of a reasonable gain—they are equally ignorant. That he is vitally interested in the general welfare, and must earnestly desire that good conditions prevail, the great public are not sufficiently aware.

"Unmindful of these things, it is easy for the demagogue to stir up prejudice and excite the masses against you.

"The echoes of such malevolent voices still trouble the air, and we are assured by the oratorical prodigy of Nebraska that four years more of popular miseducation is to succeed the hysterical appeals from which you and the whole country have so grievously suffered.

Economics vs. Politics.

"It is unfortunate to the permanency of our industrial well being that our great economic questions, which truly lie in the domain of science, are obliged to find their solution in the field of politics. But we are met with this necessity, and true answer we must make or suffer punishment. The gravity of this fact has been lately fully exemplified. For weeks and months enterprise came to a halt. Capital went into camp while in the agitated political field was being fought out and determined the questions so vital to the healthful activity of both. Happily the voice of the people was in accord with the highest wisdom. Enterprise has heard with joy the verdict given. The captains of industry are calling into line the waiting and broken ranks for a forward movement. Capital gladly joins the moving columns and the hearts of all the people are quickened with new life and hope.

Justified by a new confidence which lends strength to action, the business-men of our country must stand together in correcting all real grievances, in condemning all abuses, and, above all, in maintaining inviolate in our laws those principles which exist in the nature of things—principles not man-made, but discovered by the wise, as expressions of a divine order."

INSURANCE AFFAIRS.

The Chicago Board of Fire Insurance Brokers yesterday appointed a committee to formulate a protest to the Council asking that the $25 license fee be collected from the Chicago Underwriters' Association instead of from the brokers.

It was a matter of gossip among the agents after the meeting that the brokers contemplated also the expediency of enjoining the underwriters from collecting the $25 initiation from each broker doing business in Chicago.

It is said the brokers feel that they have strengthened their board by admitting to membership Max Dembufsky and C. E. Rollo.

Pending a settlement of the vexatious license problem a member was sent to the City Hall to ask the City Collector not to proceed against any delinquent brokers until a few days elapsed, and time was given for an adjustment of the differences between the brokers and agents.

O. A. Lewis, a broker, No. 1105 Milwaukee avenue, who is not a member of the board and does not pay dues to the agents' association, said at the brokers' meeting:

"I paid dues regularly to the association for several years, until I decided a private organization, which it is, had no right to tax me because I was transacting a legitimate insurance business. I stopped paying the dues, and in the latter part of last year I was put out of the association and my name was 'blacklisted.' Then I set about securing evidence, and did collect enough, I think, to prove a conspiracy. I am willing to give the evidence to the brokers if they wish to begin action. My real estate agent's license from the city covers my insurance work."

The brokers' committee will meet today and draw up the protest to the Council. It will plead in behalf of 500 small brokers scattered throughout the city, and will say they cannot afford to continue business if they are compelled to pay two taxes, aggregating $50 a year—the license of $25 and the initiation of $25.

A member of the association said of the rumor that the brokers might try to enjoin the association from collecting the initiation fee:

"That body has no standing in law, and the brokers would be driven to enjoining all of its members. That manifestly would be a difficult thing to do. The interests of the brokers are so closely allied with those of the agents that the brokers could not well afford to alienate the agents."

Managers of large companies have gathered encouragement during the last two days from the increase noticeable in mail receipts from out-of-town premiums. They hold this apparent revival of interest in business is a result of the election of McKinley, and look on it as a healthy sign of coming prosperity.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 11.—The paper of E. H. Whitcomb of Davenport, Ia., on the "Proper Scope of Government Supervision of Insurance" before the convention of Assessment Life Underwriters today was the cause of considerable condemnation. Mr. Whitcomb said that under the State and inter-State systems of insurance supervision there were too many opportunities for error by incompetence of supervisors and blackmail by unscrupulous examiners. H. J. Reinmund of Binghamton, N. Y., said he had been an Insurance Commissioner himself and knew that the majority of them were men of honesty. A. P. Riddle, Insurance Commissioner of Kansas, thought it fair to state that there was no more corruption among supervisors, etc., than some insurance companies who supported a fund to corrupt Legislatures. George D. Eldridge, Chairman of the Executive committee, declared that supervisors were remarkable for their honesty, ability, and fair dealing.

Has Chicago Man in View for State Labor Commissioner.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—The appointment of Prof. Bemis of Chicago as State Labor Commissioner is stated to be one of the possibilities of Governor-elect Pingree's coming administration. It is thought his immediate removal to this State would obviate his present want of citizenship.

MONROE DOCTRINE WINS.

ENGLAND PRACTICALLY ADMITS IT IN THE VENEZUELA CASE.

Lord Salisbury's Decision to Submit Its Claims to Arbitration with the United States Is Generally Regarded as Full Recognition of the American Idea—English Press Points Out That America Is Made the Representative of the Smaller Republics.

[SPECIAL CABLE BY JULIAN RALPH.]

London, Nov. 11.—[Copyright, 1896, by the New York Journal.]—At the Foreign Office today Sir Thomas Sanderson, Permanent Under Secretary of State, and the next man to Lord Salisbury, said in regard to the Venezuela arbitration:

"So far only the general basis of settlement has been agreed upon. No arbitrators have been appointed or definitely considered as yet; all that will be matter for future arrangements, and will take some little time; indeed, it may be a month or two before the final arrangements for arbitration are completed."

Sir Thomas was asked what light he could throw on the progress of the two countries toward what might be called a perpetual arbitration arrangement or commission.

"Nothing of the kind has definitely entered into the negotiations," he answered. "I think that the matter has only gone so far as Lord Salisbury suggested in his speech."

In regard to the plan for the perpetual arbitration of all quarrels not concerning vital national interests less progress has been made. Yet this scheme is actually under discussion, and both sides acknowledge that the Alaskan boundary dispute is sufficient incentive for hurrying to completion a plan promising greater advantages for English-speaking people and greater safeguards for the peace of the world than any project now enlisting the attention of mankind.

The United States Venezuelan Commission stood in the way of arbitration and threatened embarrassment to both countries until by a later arrangement it was agreed that the commission should merely gather and classify all records bearing on the boundary dispute.

This obstacle removed, the next series of letters which passed between Washington and London dealt with arbitration and what scope it should have. Neither country opposed arbitration, but England stood out for securing protection to all well established English settlements within the debated territory.

In gaining this point Lord Salisbury scored a great victory, though nothing like the American triumph by which the Monroe doctrine has now been riveted to international law. That is an epoch-making victory, and establishes our right to maintain the policy which Lord Salisbury, only ten months ago, bade us remember was not recognized as law by any people except ourselves.

The most significant point of all is the fact that Venezuela is not represented on the commission.

The St. James' Gazette tonight says the British arbitrators will be eminent lawyers of judicial standing, and adds the only name which occurs on the spur of the moment is that of Lord Davey.

London Press Comment.

The Westminster Gazette this afternoon says: "The locus standi of the United States, which the Marquis of Salisbury denied, is now undisputed, and is accepted even to the length of ruling out Venezuela. We would much rather settle with the United States, but we naturally look to the United States to go bail for Venezuela in return. To this assertion of the Monroe doctrine the most satisfactory point of all is appended—a general arbitration agreement."

The St. James' Gazette asks whether the agreement will not throw into arbitration "all the sparsely settled region between the Schomburgk line and the settled territory of Guiana, which Lord Kimberley and the Marquis of Salisbury declared they would never submit to arbitration, whereupon President Cleveland and Secretary Olney declared they should or the United States would make them." It adds: "If Great Britain does submit this issue to arbitration it will be difficult to disprove the American claim that the agreement is a square backdown upon the part of Great Britain. That the arrangement includes a general treaty of arbitration is an indisputable benefit, and the decision of the committee not to report relieves President Cleveland's government of the most serious difficulty of its own creation."

The Pall Mall Gazette thinks that hereafter disputes are less likely to occur "now that the principle of dealing directly with the little republics is set aside in favor of negotiations with their powerful protector."

The Globe criticises the composition of the tribunal and refers to the fact that Venezuela is not represented, "in spite of Lord Salisbury's early assertion that the question at issue only concerned the United Kingdom and Venezuela."

Frederick R. Coudert Talks.

New York, Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Frederic R. Coudert, member of the Venezuelan Commission, returned from Washington today and expressed the satisfaction as well as the surprise of the Boundary Commission at Lord Salisbury's announced determination to arbitrate the Venezuelan difficulty. Mr. Coudert accepted unreservedly the contention of the British Premier that "fifty-year settlers should not be disturbed."

"The proposal," he said, "that the arbitration treaty shall recognize as an unassailable title the undisturbed possession for fifty years of any part of the territory in dispute is but another recognition of the doctrine of vested rights. If the Venezuelans sit idly by while the English are subduing a wilderness and permit them without protest to cultivate lands for such a length of time they undoubtedly lose their title."

As this sentiment probably represents the views of President Cleveland it is important to Venezuela. Mr. Coudert said further:

"The Boundary Commission has done a vast amount of work and determined many points incidental to the controversy. It seems probable now there will be nothing more for us to do, as the Arbitration Commission must necessarily go over the same ground. We have decided to withhold our report for the present, and may finally only report to the President for the information of the State Department.

"I think within two weeks Ambassador Sir Julian Pauncefote and Secretary of State Olney will sign the protocol of the arbitration treaty which will entirely settle the boundary dispute between Venezuela and British Guiana.

"Great Britain has seen the error of her former and untenable position in opposition to the Monroe doctrine, and her consent to arbitration is practically an admission of the justice of Venezuela's claims."

Oscar May Delegate His Authority.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—To the information that King Oscar II. of Sweden and Norway had been agreed on as the fifth and final arbitrator in the Venezuelan controversy the additional fact can be given that the agreement is that King Oscar II. will be the fifth and final arbitrator, with the understanding that if his royal functions are such as to make it undesirable to sit with the arbitrators he will designate another, probably his Chief Justice, to participate in the formal meetings. At the same time it is the King whom the two governments will regard as the final arbitrator, even though he should designate some one to serve in a formal capacity.

The personnel of the judicial members of the commission has not been determined, and no names are mentioned except that the Solicitor-General of England may be one of those designated.

TRANSVAAL IS AFTER INDEMNITY.

Puts In Claim for £1,000,000 Against South Africa Company.

London, Nov. 11.—A special dispatch from Johannesburg says that the Government of the Transvaal Republic has decided to put in a claim for £1,000,000 indemnity against the British Chartered South Africa company as one of the results of the raid of Dr. Jameson and his followers into the territory of the Transvaal.

At the annual meeting today of the Consolidated Gold Fields company John Hays Hammond, the American mining engineer who was in charge of the works at the time of the last disturbances at Johannesburg and who was condemned to death, but subsequently reprieved and heavily fined as one of the members of the famous Reform committee, presented an exhaustive report on the deep level mining. It was received with great favor, and Mr. Hammond was voted the thanks of the company.

The meeting was largely attended and enthusiastic. At the closing Mr. Hammond was interviewed regarding the prospects of South Africa. He said:

"The prospects in South Africa were never brighter. The recent depression in prices caused a scarcity of money, and every one was obliged to sell good securities, but the outlook now is good. There has been a large gold output.

"The report that President Kruger will cancel the claims held by the company is untrue. It was only a bear movement."

SULTAN ORDERS REFORMS EXECUTED

Provincial Authorities Instructed to Put Them in Force.

Constantinople, Nov. 11.—The official summary of the reforms to be put into execution by the Turkish Government in accordance with their promise has been published, and it is announced that the provincial authorities have received instructions to execute them immediately.

The reforms promised by the Sultan are:

The liberation from the prisons of the Ottoman Empire of all persons against whom no charges have been preferred; the issuance to the police of orders that all peaceable Armenians must not be prosecuted; the immediate convocation of the Armenian National Assembly for the purpose of electing a patriarch; the trial by court-martial of Mazhuarpy, accused of responsibility for the murder of Father Salvator; the dismissal of the Vali of Diarbekir (already complied with) and the sending of definite instructions to all Valis that they must repress all further acts of violence; an estimate of the cost of rebuilding the Catholic convents partially destroyed in Asia Minor; the giving of aid to the residents of those districts which suffered during the recent troubles; the issuance of a decree immediately enforcing the reforms granted in 1895 to the six vilayets of Armenia; the extension of those reforms to other provinces of the empire.

Children Removed to Places of Safety.

While counseling the American missionaries to remain at their posts in Anatolia, United States Minister Terrell has induced the removal of their children to places of safety.

PROPOSITION TO PARTITION CHINA.

Sir Charles Dilke Says Powers Have Considered Such a Move.

London, Nov. 11.—In the course of a speech at Enfield last evening Sir Charles Dilke, the well known authority on international politics, said that England had recently rejected a proposal by three great powers to partition China. He also said that the alleged recent inspection of the forts of the Dardanelles by a Russian General was by order of the Russian Government, and that therefore it was possible that Russia would regard a British attack on the Dardanelles as a casus belli.

The Globe this afternoon confirms on "undeniable authority" the statement made in a St. Petersburg dispatch to the Times, quoting the Novosti as saying that towards the close of the war between China and Japan, China offered to cede the Island of Formosa to Great Britain unconditionally, with the view of excluding the Japanese from that territory, but Lord Rosebery, the then Prime Minister, promptly declined the offer, which was made through the Viceroy of Hankow.

STARVATION THREATENS 1,250,000.

Eleven Districts in India Are on the Verge of Famine.

London, Nov. 11.—A special dispatch from Bombay says that in eleven districts of the Deccan and Concan a million and a quarter of people are believed to be on the verge of starvation. The dispatch adds that riots have occurred at Shahabad and Kazod.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 11.—Prince Obolenski, writing to the Novoe Vremya, recommends the export of Russian cereals to India and suggests that rye should be sold in Odessa at 40 kopeks per pood. It is understood in this connection that the British Ambassador at St. Petersburg, Sir N. R. O'Connor, recently visited Odessa.

The Russian newspapers are making warm appeals to the people of Russia to contribute funds for the relief of the famine sufferers in India.

WEYLER CAPTURES A STRONGHOLD.

Loses a Brigadier-General, Seven Officers, and Forty-seven Soldiers.

Havana, Nov. 11.—Capt.-Gen. Weyler, according to a dispatch from the front, has captured the insurgent strongholds in the mountains of El Rubo in the Province of Pinar del Rio. A Brigadier-General, seven officers, and forty-seven soldiers were wounded. No further details were obtainable as this message is sent.

During the second fortnight of November 18,000 additional troops are being placed in the field to operate against the insurgents.

The public trial of Julien Sanguilly, the American citizen charged with conspiracy in kidnaping Ferdindez de Castro, will take place on Nov. 22.

To Force Fight in Open Ground.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—Information here is that the Spanish military operations begun early in October are about to go forward with greater energy than at any previous time. Important results are expected from this forward movement within the next three weeks. There are now 25,000 more Spanish troops en route for Cuba. They will be distributed in the Western provinces. It is expected that with these additional troops in position the four Western provinces will be completely garrisoned and occupied at every point by the government troops.

The insurgent leader Maceo moved to the coast for the purpose of receiving a pneumatic dynamite gun, which had been landed with great difficulty. The reports reaching here show that the trials of the gun failed to show it to be formidable, the shot carrying only 500 yards, or less than the distance carried by rifles. Under these circumstances Maceo has retraced his steps without the dynamite gun.

Meanwhile the Spanish forces have been divided into two main divisions, one in the south and the other in the north of the island. The main purpose of the troops has been to occupy the mountain passes, and this has proceeded so rapidly that it is asserted here positively that every approach and egress to the mountain recess is now commanded by a heavy force of Spanish troops. This plan of campaign is relied on to force the insurgents to fight in the open country.

The civil affairs of the Cubans also have undergone a change within recent days. By agreement between the leaders of the Liberal, Conservative, and Home Rule parties—constituting all the loyal elements—they have been merged into one party known as the "Party of Common Defense." The main feature of agreement is the termination of the rebellion before any plan of autonomy shall be put into operation.

Canovas Denies a Report.

Madrid, Nov. 11.—The Premier, Señor Canovas del Castillo, denies the statement that the Spanish government has entered into an agreement with the government of the United States to terminate the war in Cuba within a stated period.

TO DISCUSS THE BERING SEA CASE.

Counsel and Commissioners Gathering at Victoria.

Victoria, B. C., Nov. 11.—Fred Peters, Premier of Prince Edward's Island; F. R. Beque of Montreal and R. E. Venning of the Marine and Fisheries Department, Ottawa, have arrived here. Peters and Beque will be counsel for the British and Canadian Government at the Bering Sea Commission, which will open on Monday. Venning, who has made a specialty of the sealing industry as it affected the Department of Marine, will also assist. Sir Charles Herbert Tupper is also busily engaged in preparing the case for the owners of the several seized schooners, whom he represents. Mr. Putnam, United States Commissioner, and Don M. Dickinson, American counsel, are expected Saturday.

Vice-President Assumes Control.

Rio Janeiro, Nov. 11.—A letter was read in the Chamber of Deputies today from the Vice-President, Dr. Manoel Victorino Pereira, announcing that he had assumed the powers of President in view of the illness of Dr. Prudente J. de Moraes Barros, the President. The condition of President Moraes is improving.

"Munchausen of Monkeyland."

London, Nov. 11.—The Truth has an article covering a page and a half, headed "The Munchausen of Monkeyland," dealing with Prof. Garner, who claims to have distinguished words in a monkey language, and his book, repeating the charges of imposture and declaring that the whole story of Prof. Garner's adventures among the gorillas is an impudent humbug.

an objection to playing with our team on account of charges that had been made that the Chicago club employed professionals. We assured him that we would only have amateur athletes on our team for the year 1896.

Now, gentlemen, should any or all of you, who are well known to be members of the C. A. A. team, let yourselves out during the present season to play in another team you will certainly be subject to the charge of being professionals. The press of the country will take the matter up, and the Chicago Athletic Association will again be charged, and justly, with having employed professional football players. Possibly my fears that you intend to play with the Allegheny team are groundless, but if you have thoughts of so doing I am convinced your consent has been obtained without your having given careful consideration to all the points in the case.

You are all Chicago men and must be proud of your city and the club with which you are connected, and if you have unthinkingly consented to play as above indicated I trust and feel confident that your pride in your city and club will restrain you from playing during the present season in any other club than that of the Chicago Athletic Association.

Capt. William Hale Thompson will present this letter to you in person, and I certainly believe that, having the interests of Chicago and the Chicago Athletic Association at heart, you will see the matter as we do and govern yourselves accordingly. I have the honor to remain yours very truly,

E. A. POTTER,
President Chicago Athletic Association.

ALTGELD seems unable to get himself out of that snarl.

IT was a close shave in Kentucky; the mere flop of an egg did it.

McKINLEY is not only besieged by "opportunity" but importunity.

THE Venezuela Commission seems to have been loaded with blank cartridges.

"THE new woman in fiction" is hardly accurate. The new woman is fiction.

THERE was a subtle humor in Chairman Jones' refusal to give it up. He never had it.

"PROSPERITY'S advance agent" appears to have been distributing free tickets to all comers.

BRYAN is right when he says the free silver craze will live. It will live as a warning to posterity.

A CONSIGNMENT of "filled cheese" has been "seized at Ottawa." This sounds like another Kurd outrage.

ONE of the newly demonstrated truths of animal life is that the lion cannot endure the protracted screams of the American eagle.

THE Thanksgiving proclamations are followed by the usual report of a small cranberry crop. This is certainly a sauce of annoyance.

IT is discouraging to note that American money is again in favor in Canada. The exodus of cashiers from the United States may be resumed.

A PRINCETON student has been arrested for "raising" a $2 silver certificate. In these times he should be congratulated on his ability to raise the money.

THE Independent Order of Brighton Girls was formed at Brighton, Mich., for the purpose of encouraging matrimony. The encouragement proved so successful that the order can barely muster up a quorum at its weekly meetings. It is proposed now to neutralize the rapid change in sentiment among the young men by changing the name to the Order of Independent Brighton Girls, for the purpose of discouraging matrimony for a time. The experiment will be watched with interest.

THE New York stock market yesterday opened weak and fractionally lower. Local stocks were fractionally lower. Sterling rates were strong. New York exchange sold at 40 to 60 cents premium.—Leading speculative produce markets were fairly active but weaker. As compared with the latest prices of Tuesday December wheat closed 1⅛ cents lower, May corn ⅝@¾ cent lower, oats ¼@⅜ cent lower, cash rye steady, barley firm, flaxseed steady, January pork 5 cents lower, lard 2½ cents lower, and ribs steady.

THERE is a possibility after all that the statue of the Bacchante will be given a place in the public library in Boston. The Art Commission admits having seen only a picture of the statue and that when it sees the real thing it may reverse its decision. The real ground for hope, however, rests in the expectation that the statue "will be fenced in during the winter" and that its lack of drapery will not be so intolerable during the warm weather. No such compromise should be accepted by the artist. A fenced-in Bacchante would be as grotesque as if it were arrayed in bloomers.

SOME decisive action should be taken to prevent the indiscriminate freezing of barkeepers by coldblooded thugs. It seems to have become a fad among these rapacious robbers to lay away the dispenser of liquids in the ice box before relieving the establishment of its visible assets. At this time of year particularly it must be extremely disagreeable to be subjected to this protracted chill and to be forced to listen to the ribald glee of the gang as it empties the till. Moreover, it is left too much for chance to determine whether the iced "barkeep" will be discovered in time to take any subsequent joy in life. If this practice spreads to any greater extent it will be necessary to heat the ice box by steam or some other agency in order to make these holdup and cold-storage experiences even tolerable.

BRYAN is going to Denver to make a talk. He will find a sympathetic audience there. The great majority of the people of Colorado voted for him, because they thought the adoption of the policy he advocated would have added something to the value of silver bullion and would have started a speculation in silver mining stocks, which would have enabled the Coloradoans to unload on greenhorns the hundreds of thousands of shares held by them. Those hopes were largely unfounded. The gold price of silver might have advanced three cents an ounce, but it would have gone back to the old figure in a few weeks. During that period, however, there would have been a boom in mining stocks. Many of the Coloradoans talked about the restoration of the old price of 129 cents an ounce. But they knew better, for they knew half a day's labor will produce as much silver as a day's labor did in 1890, and that old high prices cannot be maintained in the face of cheaper cost of production. After free coinage, as before it, the value of silver would be fixed by the Lombard street money-changers, and they would not let it go above 68 cents an ounce, knowing it could not be worth more than that. Bryan might as well tell his audience that.

TERMS OF THE VENEZUELAN AGREEMENT.

The terms of agreement between Great Britain and the United States for the settlement of the Venezuelan dispute have been fixed in Washington. Lord Salisbury's announcement that an agreement had been reached appears to have been based on a cablegram giving him the details which he received only an hour before he delivered his Guild Hall speech. The most significant feature of the settlement is that all the demands of the United States have been acceded to without a suggestion of compromise. The Monroe doctrine has been formally and unreservedly recognized by England, the Schomburgk line has been dropped entirely from the contention, and all the land, settled or otherwise, which the Government of Venezuela claims is to have its title fixed by the arbitrators, excepting only the land which may have been actually possessed for fifty years. This tenure of fifty years will constitute a good title.

The agreement further provides that Oscar II., King of Sweden and Norway, shall be the fifth arbitrator, and that the Lord Chief Justice of England and the Chief Justice of the United States shall each choose two others. King Oscar is known to be friendly to the United States, and his selection for the important position in which he may have the deciding vote on the final settlement seems to be a distinct advantage. It is assured, at least, that no prejudices against the American people will warp his sense of justice.

This agreement is confined exclusively to the dispute in Venezuela, and has no bearing on the larger question of a general treaty of arbitration between England and the United States. The latter must be left to subsequent diplomatic negotiations, but has received a decided impetus toward a successful conclusion. The interest of the United States, moreover, practically ceases with this arbitral agreement. The position of this Nation at the outset was not that of a principal but of a friend of Venezuela, because Venezuela was on the South American continent. It contended only for arbitration between England and Venezuela on a point in which only those two nations were directly concerned, and it based its interference on the doctrine of Monroe, which it insisted should be respected by all other nations. Now that the fight has been won with honor in every detail the United States as a Nation will drop out of the controversy, and the Board of Arbitration will finally dispose of the question under the subsequent agreement by the Governments of England and Venezuela that the findings of the board will be respected.

The success of Uncle Sam's championship of Venezuela is trivial compared with the greater victory involved, the recognition of the Monroe doctrine by England as a determining factor in the settlement of disputes which involve land on the American continents. Our prestige will be infinitely enlarged among the nations, for the fact is patent that England's present attitude is exactly opposite to that it assumed when the dispute arose. England has backed down squarely, and that is a very pregnant fact in this international episode.

THE MISSISSIPPI IN NO DANGER.

The New York Tribune has become concerned, all of a sudden, for the maintenance of the purity of the waters of the Mississippi River. It has just learned that the opening of the Chicago drainage channel will send the sewage of this, the most populous city in the country, down to the gulf, via the Mississippi, with disastrous consequences for the latter. The Tribune declares that "no city has a right to send forth pollution to a thousand miles of public waterway."

This zeal is disinterested. There are many large cities on the Mississippi below the mouth of the Illinois River, down which the diluted Chicago sewage will flow. The inhabitants of those cities, who are intelligent though they do live in the West, will see that the Mississippi suffers no harm. If the Tribune attends to the purity of the Hudson it will be attending more strictly to its own business than at present.

The interest taken by the New York paper in the welfare of the Mississippi is not only uncalled for but is marked by singular ignorance. It is true that when the drainage channel is completed much more Chicago sewage will drain into the Mississippi than in the last thirty years, but that stream will not be contaminated in the slightest degree.

The Tribune appears to be utterly unaware of the fact that running water purifies itself. A stream may be loaded down with impurities, but if its course is long enough all the offensive matter deposited in it will be deprived of its harmful qualities. The microbes attack the sewage and break it up. The gases evolved in the process are offensive when the sewage is pure, but when it is diluted the nostrils are not conscious of the work of destruction that is being carried on. The microbes and oxygen do their work, and the water, foul at first, will become drinkable at last.

In the summer of 1886, an extraordinarily dry season, the late Dr. Rauch, then Secretary of the State Board of Health, undertook to determine the rate of purification of the water in the Illinois and Michigan Canal. That canal was filled with the sewage-laden water pumped into it from the South Branch of the Chicago River. Samples of South Branch water at Bridgeport, canal water at Lockport, canal and Desplaines River water at Joliet, and Illinois River water at Ottawa and Peoria were submitted to chemical examination.

The water at Bridgeport was intolerably filthy. It had as much sewage as it could hold. But Dr. Rauch's report states:

> Over one-half of the sewage pollution disappears before reaching Lockport, twenty-nine miles below Bridgeport, and nearly one-third of the remainder is lost in the next four miles, the increased rate of purification in this distance being due to the mechanical agitation of the water by falls, wheels, lockage, etc., and the greater extent of surface exposed to aeration by the union of the canal and the Desplaines River.
> It was stated that an average of about 45,000 cubic feet per minute was being pumped from the river into the canal during this period. Whatever the quantity, it is obvious that if the volume of dilution had been increased by 20 per cent, the contents of the canal would have been entirely inoffensive to the senses on reaching Joliet.

The discharge via the drainage channel will be 300,000 cubic feet a minute, and the current will be much more rapid than it is in the sluggish canal.

It appears also from Dr. Rauch's report that, although the rainfall was very light during the months of June, July, and August, and the Illinois River was consequently unusually low, the oxidation of the sewage poured into that stream via the canal went on rapidly.

At Bridgeport there were in every million parts of water 26.56 parts of free ammonia. At Ottawa, eighty-one miles below Bridgeport, there were but 0.413 parts, and at Peoria, 159 miles below, only .027 parts. While the water at Peoria was not the best in the world, the city was still drawing water from the river.

Below Peoria the river is fouled again by the discharge from the distilleries and other manufacturing concerns, but at Grafton, where the Illinois empties into the Mississippi, its water is perfectly pure.

At no time in the past has the Illinois carried any impurities into the Mississippi. It certainly will not do so when the sewage is so much more diluted than at present and the flow through the drainage channel is 300,000 cubic feet a minute.

As the Illinois will not pollute the Mississippi, that stream will be no worse off when the drainage channel is completed. That river manages to get along very well now, though it drains a million and a half square miles of territory.

The sewage of many populous cities is poured into it. It receives the drainage of countless farms. Vast quantities of decaying vegetable as well as animal matter are carried off by it. And yet, because of the ability of running water to purify itself, that of the Mississippi is drinkable at St. Louis and at New Orleans. There is much sediment in the water, which settles when allowed to stand, but it is sweet and wholesome.

Since the drainage channel will not pollute the Mississippi, but, on the contrary, will swell its current with an additional supply of pure water, the New York Tribune is worrying itself unnecessarily over something which does not concern it. The Mississippi Valley will look after that river.

AN EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS DOUBTFUL.

A dispatch from Washington states that there is no verification of the rumor that the President-elect will call an extra session of Congress for the consideration of tariff legislation. There are various reasons, indeed, for the belief that there will be no such extra session. As the Democrats and silver men can reap no further advantage from embarrassing the Republicans, both Houses of the new Congress being opposed to free silver, there is good reason to believe that they will let the Dingley bill, which has passed the House, pass the Senate and become a law without any fight over it, and this will be all that is needed to meet the present revenue situation, and at the same time will prevent the possibility of plunging the business world into confusion just at the time when as the outcome of the election it is getting on its feet again. The Dingley bill will add between thirty and forty millions to the revenue, and as the bill limits the operation of the law to August, 1897, this will give time to consider a general tariff bill, or if not the limit can be extended.

It certainly is not to the interests of the American people to recast the whole tariff bill just at a time when they are getting on their feet again, especially when the Dingley bill will furnish sufficient additional revenue to run the government without issuing any more bonds if the government's business is managed economically.

Another reason for believing that an extra session will not be called is that the President-elect was not the real author of the bill that bears his name and was not as strenuous for it as some others. He is not in favor of reënacting that bill, for he knows it was too high. He also knows that many thousand Democrats voted for him who are opposed to excessive duties, and that their votes helped to turn the scale. If these Democrats indeed had had pointers that the new administration would have been satisfied with a moderate tariff McKinley would have had tens of thousands more votes. Kentucky, Tennessee, and North Carolina would probably have gone Republican by big majorities.

There will be no necessity for an extra session next spring if the Senate in this Congress is not malicious. If it will allow the House bill to pass and tack on 50 cents, 75 cents, or $1 tax on beer the country then can rest until the time comes for a thorough consideration of the tariff question, and it will not drive away Democratic voters who took the place of fool Republicans who thought they could pay their debts by debauching the currency and cheating all round. The Dingley bill would take effect immediately and the revenue would begin coming in at once. The government would have enough to live on and Mr. McKinley would not be compelled to summon the new Congress to fret over a tariff bill before the time came and to throw business interests into confusion again. There is no question that Maj. McKinley wants to have the Dingley bill passed.

ANTE-ELECTION NATURALIZATION.

At a Civic Federation meeting held this week Mr. Lyman J. Gage expressed the opinion that a law should be enacted making it impossible for a man to vote until a year after he had taken out his naturalization papers.

There was a great deal of hurried ante-election naturalization this year, as there is most years. Mr. Gage witnessed some of it and the sight did not please him. He did not relish the idea that men unable to read or write the English language should be converted suddenly into American citizens and then rushed to the polls to cast their ignorant votes.

Some of those at the meeting seemed to sympathize with Mr. Gage, and one of them stated that "the laws of this State can be made to read that no foreigner can vote until he has lived a year in this State as a citizen."

The Illinois Constitution, by which the Legislature is governed, declares that—

> Every person having resided in this State one year, in the county ninety days, and in the election district thirty days next preceding any election therein, who shall be a male citizen of the United States, above the age of 21 years, shall be entitled to vote at such election.

The Legislature cannot modify these conditions and make them either more or less rigid. The Constitution does not require a person of foreign birth to live in the State a year subsequent to his naturalization so as to entitle him to vote. Therefore the Legislature cannot impose any such condition.

In New York no person can vote at an election who has not been naturalized ninety days prior thereto. That has stopped the unseemly rush just before election and has made it easier to detect naturalization frauds. But the Constitution of the State had to be amended in order to introduce the new system. The Legislature could have done nothing.

So if the people of this State chose to do it they could amend their Constitution and deny the right of suffrage to every man who had not resided in the State a year as a citizen of the United States. But, as was shown last week, it is not easy to amend the organic law.

The evil complained of by Mr. Gage is a real one. But whatever is done to mitigate it must be done by the Judges. They have charge of the naturalization business, and they are not obliged to naturalize persons who are unfit to be citizens. They have unlimited discretion, but they rarely exercise it.

CURRENT STYLES IN FICTION.

New books are appearing in unprecedented numbers this fall, and works of fiction, as usual, constitute about one-half of the total output. While it cannot be said that the number of really great novels is any larger than in former years, there are yet some gratifying improvements to be noted in the general product.

For the moralist the most important change in the fall styles of fiction is seen in the quite general absence of the erotic or pathological nastiness that played so large a part in the fiction of a year ago. The wave of bilge-water has apparently passed—thanks to the generally expressed disgust of the American reading public. For the stylist the growing predominance of the romantic tale, as opposed to the realistic novel, is the fact of chief significance. For the artist the increase of illustration and the boom in artistic covers are important.

But for the author and the publisher the most powerful influence at work is found in the vast increase in the size of the editions demanded. First editions of from 25,000 to 50,000 have come to be an ordinary occurrence in the case of writers like Ian Maclaren, Marie Corelli, Mrs. Humphry Ward, and the rest of the elect. The causes that have brought about so momentous a change could not fail to have a powerful influence upon both author and publisher.

One of the most interesting and gratifying results of these large editions is seen in the final exit of the British three-volume novel. The "tri-voluminous" form known to Charles Reade, Dickens, Thackeray, Trollope, Scott, and all who sought to follow in their footsteps, has at last died the death. The important novels published in London this fall are nearly all in single volume form, and hence are accessible to about thrice as many readers as the cumbrous and expensive things hitherto demanded by British literary tradition.

How great a part American influence has played in this British reform may be inferred from the simple fact that Kipling was able to secure more than double as much for the serial rights of "Captains Courageous" in the United States as in England. As in the case of "Trilby" and of the "Bonnie Brier Bush," the American sales of English books frequently eclipse the British sales entirely and set the pace in the matter of editions.

But for American readers the chief interest of the passing of the British three-decker is found in the influence it is certain to have upon authors. In the days when none but a three-volume story could find a publisher the natural tendency was to pad every story, no matter what might be the vitality of the plot, to the required dimensions. Trollope, in his autobiography, has explained his methods of padding with charming naïveté. With a Dickens or a Thackeray the effect was not so fatal, but with all the tendency was to weigh down the narrative with a millstone that would sooner or later sink it beneath the reach of popular interest.

With the present style of putting almost all novels in but one volume, and letting the size of the book depend upon the size of the story instead of the reverse, the author has every reason to abjure padding and devote his extra time to making his work clear, sharply cut, and polished. True, the increased demands, and the consequent temptation to turn out half a dozen novels per annum, may undo this beneficial effect. But an author with a literary conscience at least has a fair chance to live up to it and to receive his due reward in the continued vitality of his works.

On the whole, despite the ever-spreading inundation of mediocre novels, there is every reason to take a hopeful view of the present and future of American and English fiction.

A WARSHIP TIRED OF LIFE.

The picturesque career of the battleship Texas has been materially augmented by the graceful sinking of the vessel at its dock in the Brooklyn navy yard. There have been several attempts to assign a technical cause for the incident, but the fact seems to be that the boat simply got tired of remaining on top of the water and decided to go to the bottom. The commandant of the yard checked the possible spread of alarm by hastening to assure the public that the boat would go no further and that the calamity was not of serious proportions. "The boat is resting easily," he said, "on a muddy bottom," and this confident tone allayed any fear that perhaps the repose of the unfortunte Texas might be troubled or that the erratic craft might be contemplating a continuance of its journey away from the surface of the earth.

The truth is the Texas has protested from the start against being forced into existence. It was designed for a German ship with an entirely different name, and has offered every possible objection to being transported to this country and reared up to carry the name of the Lone Star State at its masthead. It started in to kill the workmen who were building it, but was forced to abandon this large contract, although it had made considerable headway in the undertaking. Then it recklessly plunged into a fire at Richmond, broke its propeller the first time they tried to move it, toppled over and nearly sank when being fitted out with guns, ran aground in the navy yard, indulged in a score of such rebellious performances, and, finding them all unavailing, finally developed a general structural weakness which cost the government $125,000 to repair.

It would almost seem that the poetical "thrill of life" had indeed been felt by this misanthropic vessel and that this latest affair was only the desperate attempt at self-destruction of a warship all of whose hopes in life had been blasted.

THEY LIKE BAYARD.

Ambassador Bayard is a great pet of the British free-traders and anti-American aristocracy. They vie in flattering him, and he loves it as a child loves candy. A London dispatch describing the Lord Mayor's banquet says:

> During the banquet Lord Salisbury was absorbed in thought and very nervous.
> Mr. Bayard got hopelessly mixed up in the formalities of the loving cup. He drank twice instead of passing it to the Duchess of Devonshire.
> Mr. Bayard was the third person to be presented to the new Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress. His predecessors were scarcely noticed, but, as Mr. Bayard approached the dais and slightly bowed, there was an outburst of ringing cheers from the guests.
> Mr. Bayard had a special seat of honor at the main, or south, table, two seats from Lord Salisbury, and between the Duchess of Devonshire and Lady Cranborne. All the other diplomats were seated at a side table.
> The tables furnished seats for over 900 guests, and the dinner cost £5,000 ($25,000).

WITHIN a week after the defeat of the Bryan movement the United States Treasury is in a position to refuse to receive gold in exchange for certificates or greenbacks. This is a result of the election worth bearing in mind in case the country should again be menaced by the danger which caused the hoarding of gold the week before the election.—New York Post.

The reason of the refusal seems to be that the Treasury at the time was short of certificates and greenbacks. But things have wonderfully improved since the crushing defeat of Bryan and the Demo-Pop scheme of repudiation and dishonesty.

ALTGELD denies that he will be a candidate for United States Senator on the ground that he would have no chance for election, and is not looking for empty honors. That is probably correct. Altgeld has no use for empty honors. Altgeld denies also that he will be a candidate for Mayor of Chicago on the ground that he does not want the office. That is poppycock. Altgeld always wants office. He wants anything that carries a salary and any kind of authority. He denied just as hotly that he would be a candidate again for Governor, but he went for the office just the same with avidity. His denials, therefore, are worthless, and mean nothing. He will be a candidate for Mayor if he can get it. He will be a candidate for anything that he can get his clutches on. It is even probable that he would be willing to be Justice of the Peace, for then he could strut and snarl a little, and if all else failed it is not impossible he would accept the keepership of the pound, as being better than nothing. O, no. No "empty honors," perhaps, for Altgeld, but anything with a dollar in it, that's his lay always.

WHILE Mr. Bryan is the recipient of gibes and scoffs from the majority of people in his hour of greatest discomfiture, it is gratifying to note the exhibition of generosity and sympathy by the Honest Money Democratic League of Peru, Ind. This band of patriots was impressed by Mr. Bryan's words when he visited Peru, especially when he said: "The prodigal son who leaves the Democratic household this year and goes to feed the hogs, when he comes back has got to come with the understanding that he must saw wood a long while before he gets to the table." The league is impressed with the probability that Mr. Bryan will seek now to separate himself from his former porcine pursuits and will desire to leave the unwholesome ranks of the Populists and make a dash for a place at the Democratic table. With Mr. Bryan's injunction in mind the league accordingly has sent him a prettily decorated saw and sawbuck, so that the process of sawing wood may be indulged under the most advantageous circumstances. "I came, I saw," will be the Bryan motto.

THE New York Tribune joins in the unreasoning cry that the Chicago drainage channel will lower the level of Erie and some of the other lakes. The government engineers who have investigated that question report that they do not know precisely what the effect will be, but they are convinced that nothing serious will happen. Those engineers call attention to the fall of recent years in lake levels, a fall with which the drainage channel can have had nothing to do, and they look on that fall as a much more serious matter than the contemplated diversion of 300,000 cubic feet a minute at this end of Lake Michigan. The way to solve the lake level problem and improve navigation is to build a dam at Niagara to add to the height of Lake Erie. The height of Huron and Michigan can be raised by works constructed in the St. Clair River. The New York Tribune should urge Congress to carry out these needed improvements, which will have to be made at some time, instead of fretting over the harmless Chicago drainage channel.

THE 4 per cent bonds that were sold to the Morgan syndicate at 104½ are now worth in the open market 120. They were worth about that price when they were sold for so much less. Comment seems to be superfluous.—Ex.

Those bonds were made payable in "coin," which would mean fifty-cent free silver dollars if the Popocracy won the election. Now that the danger of such half repudiation is happily over for several years at least those bonds are selling nearer their worth. If the Demo-Pops of the Senate had allowed an amendment to pass making bonds sold for gold payable in gold Cleveland could have obtained 18 to 20 per cent more for them. But the stupid, malicious hostility of the Demo-Pops lost to the government not less than 40 millions of gold money on the four bond sales Cleveland was obliged to make to pay tariff deficiencies of revenue and to maintain gold redemption of the greenbacks. Costly folly!

SOMEWHERE under the ruins are the political remains of the Hon. James E. Campbell of Ohio.

AFTER the Hon. Joe Blackburn has settled matters with Logan Carlisle he will proceed to whip that Republican plurality out of Kentucky.

NEXT PRESIDENT McKINLEY is not saying much now. He is sawing wood for his Cabinet.

EX-CANDIDATE BRYAN will resume his talking. His voice is recovering its strength, but his political views are still cracked and out of tune.

THAT high-minded statesman and intellectual prodigy, the Hon. Buck McCarthy, announces his early retirement from politics. He will not be a candidate for reëlection next spring. The country having been thoroughly saved and the Venezuelan question being in a fair way of amicable settlement, there is probably no better time than now for this illustrious public servant to lay aside the cares of state and enjoy a well-earned rest.

HOW ABOUT John J. Ingalls?

MR. MOODY feels greatly encouraged since the election. He is making another attempt to evangelize New York City.

Queen Amelie of Portugal has earned the love and gratitude of Lisbon by interesting herself personally and effectually in improving the hygienic condition of the city and in providing medical and surgical attendance for the poor, and especially for the children of the poor. To her efforts was due the early introduction into Portugal of the serum treatment for diphtheria, and she founded, and with the aid of her court ladies, maintains, an institution called the Dispensaria de Sua Majestade la Rainha, where sick children receive care and treatment under conditions as favorable as exist in the best private hospitals.

The young and rich Baron de Selys-Longchamps, who was recently elected Senator in Belgium, polled a remarkably large vote among the peasantry. He has caused a sensation in the office of the Secretary of the Senate by requesting that his titles be omitted in calling the roll. This sensation was increased when he announced the intention of appearing at all sessions of the Senate in the workingman's blouse which he daily wears as a symbol of his love for the masses. As the Senate is composed chiefly of Princes, noblemen, and millionaires, their opinion of their new associate's taste and sense may be easily imagined.

The Archduke Ludwig Salvator, a nephew of the Austrian Emperor, is very democratic, and often goes to the Town of Ragusa, a few miles from his home, to do the weekly marketing. When he recently went to that town on his yacht the military commander heard of it and came on board to pay his respects. He met the Archduke on-deck, and asked him: "Where will I find the Captain?" "That is myself," was the reply. "I hear that there is a very distinguished person aboard." "This is incorrect," interrupted the Captain; "on board of this vessel we are all equals," showing that he desired to preserve his incognito and would not countenance any interference.

According to a correspondent of the Washington Star Marcus A. Hanna owns a little pineapple patch in Dade County, Fla., which he loves to visit. "Mr. Hanna," he says, "was boarding at Palm Beach, where the hotels charge $6 a day during three months of the year and $4 a week during the other nine. Well, Mr. Hanna was boarding there during the $6 a day season. The germ of the pineapple contagion entered his blood, and he bought an acre of pine land from Representative Linton of Michigan, who owns a big tract of muck and pine lands along the Bicayne Bay Canal. Mr. Hanna's acre lies between the Atlantic and the Everglades, 300 miles south of Jacksonville. Uncle Mose Hawkins, a Florida Republican, 'tends' it and sends a monthly crop report to Mr. Hanna. Uncle Mose told the writer that he would rather grub an acre of hummock land with the sun at meridian and the mosquitoes in full bloom than to write out 'dat 'port ter Marse Hanner.'"

Farmers of the Middle West.

New York Post: What has become of that great farmer vote which Bryan and his Pops boasted was going to turn the Middle West, the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, and Minnesota over to Bryan? It happens that all of these great agricultural States have gone tremendously the other way, and that whereas Indiana, Illinois, and Wisconsin gave Democratic majorities in 1892, and the others gave small Republican majorities, they have flocked together this year with surprising unanimity. The figures are more eloquent than any comments—viz.:

	1892. Pluralities. Rep.	1892. Pluralities. Dem.	1896. Pluralities. Rep.	1896. Pluralities. Dem.
Indiana	.....	6,382	22,179	.....
Illinois	.....	26,993	144,131	.....
Michigan	22,918	.....	55,000	.....
Wisconsin	.....	6,470	103,250	.....
Iowa	22,965	.....	72,000	.....
Minnesota	22,157	.....	55,000	.....
	69,112	39,845	505,283	.....

Net Republican plurality, 1892, 29,267.
Net Republican gain in the Middle West, 476,046.

Although the cities did their share in producing this mighty change, it is nevertheless plain that the farmers were not touched in any perceptible degree by the free silver craze or seduced by the promise that they should pay their debts at 50 cents on the dollar.

Cannot Comprehend Kansas.

Kansas now cuts the worst figure of any State in the Union. It has tried Populism once. Years ago it chose a Peffer to the Senate, a "Sockless Jerry" Simpson to the House, and a Lewelling to the Governorship, and gave the Populists control of the Legislature. As a consequence, it saw its population decrease, the outside capital which had been invested within its borders largely withdrawn, and its good name disgraced, and cast its Electoral vote for Weaver four years ago, a Populist flat crank. Yet, in the face of all this, it has now elected a Populist State ticket, a Legislature Populist in both branches, which is to choose a United States Senator, and a Populist Judge of the Supreme Court, whose elevation to the bench will make a majority of that tribunal Populists, and has cast its Electoral vote for a Populist crank, debt repudiator, free rioter, and Supreme Court packer—Bryan. Such a performance sets at defiance all the laws by which we have heretofore judged the American people. A State which, after having once tumbled into the Populist slough and with difficulty struggled out again, deliberately jumps into it a second time, is a State which we confess we cannot understand.—New York Post.

Tomfool Result in Kansas.

Leavenworth (Kas.) Times: Extraordinary as the fact is, and from every point of view deplorable, it seems that Kansas has gone back to the Populists. The previous experiment of Populist legislation and Populist misgovernment was not enough. Kansas apparently wants some more of it. It will have a Populist Legislature and some Populist Representatives in Congress and Peffer again or some similar Populist in the United States Senate. Kansas again hurts its own interest, destroys its credit, stops its development, prevents immigration, and becomes an object of ridicule or worse to all the world.

One Experiment Enough.

Charleston News and Courier (Dem.): The next fight for bimetallism will be made on a broader basis than the impracticable ratio of 16 to 1, and the next Democratic platform, if the party is to hold together, must contain more Democracy and less Populism, more of Democratic principle and less of political expediency. The Chicago experiment was enough of its kind to satisfy those who are inclined to follow after unusual faiths and strange gods.

A Tribute from an Opponent.

Troy Daily Press (Dem.): To the brilliant generalship of Mark Hanna the President-elect and the cause of sound money are incalculably indebted. There is no estimating the harm that a weak or blundering man could have wrought in Hanna's place.

LIVE TOPICS OF TODAY.

Mrs. Cannon.

One of the striking features of the campaign in the West is the election of Mrs. Mattie Hughes Cannon to the office of State Senator from the Sixth District of Utah. She was the Democratic candidate and defeated her husband, Dr. Angus M. Cannon, who was the straight Republican nominee. Mrs. Cannon made a hot fight from the start, canvassed the district carefully. She made numerous speeches, and showed remarkable ability as an organizer. She is popular with the people of the district, and many Republicans voted for her in order to get a joke on her husband. Senator Cannon was born in North Wales, and went to Utah in 1861. She was educated at Deseret University, and for several years was a schoolteacher. She is also a printer. She graduated in medicine at Ann Arbor in 1880, and took the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1882. She has a charming home, and is a favorite in society.

A scientist some time ago discovered that the street car strap was a serious disseminator of disease, as the leather collected and held all kinds of disease germs. A sanitary strap is being tried on a New York car, the invention of a man named Clark. It consists of a hemp cord dyed red with aniline, at the bottom of which is a wooden handle, also dyed red. This dye is supposed to make the pernicious and active germs sick, and while thus rendered unfit for duty they will fall from the cord and be trampled to death on the car floor. The handle at the bottom of the cord offers a better hold for the hand than does the old straps, and it is claimed that a man can hang to one from the Battery to Harlem without experiencing more than 40 per cent of the fatigue that results from being suspended from the strap, which does not accommodate itself to the shape of the hand. But the principal advantage comes in the effect the new hangers have on microbes.

The story is told in La Medicine Moderne of a seamstress who was in the habit of allowing her dog to lick her face. She was attacked one day with a severe inflammation of the right eye. Oculists were consulted, but their treatment was unsuccessful, and owing to the fact that inflammation of the left eye was beginning the right eye was cut out. In it was found a tapeworm, which the dog had probably picked up while licking some less pleasing object than his mistress' face. The danger of the transmission of parasites by dogs, who are well known to be indiscriminate in choosing objects for the exercise of their tongues, to the hands and faces of their masters would seem to be a great one. It is remarkable that accidents of the kind related happen as rarely as they do.

Something of a stir has been created among the dentists of Georgia because the State Dental Association is advocating the passage of a law under which an Examining Board, composed of five of its members, will have the power to grant licenses to such dentists as it considers competent and respectable, and to withhold them from all other applicants. Mr. A. O. Best, a practitioner at Augusta, has raised a great cry over this as an attempt to "enslave the profession," and has scattered broadcast a circular advising the knights of the forceps and gas tank to defend their rights. The New York Times says laws like that to which he objects already exist in most States and have worked extremely well.

The German naval authorities have decided to partially heat the boilers of their men-of-war with oil. This new oil is called "neasut." It is strictly a tar oil, a product of the distillation of lignite, and is dark brown in color. Special tanks will be constructed for it on each vessel, and from these tanks pipes will lead to the furnaces and the oil will be conducted thereto through these pipes. From the pipes it will be ejected by steam in a spray, and the resulting flame is very bright and absolutely smokeless. So far as its heating power is concerned, it is declared to be greatly superior to coal. Another feature which has served to recommend it is its cheapness. The duties of the stokers are also greatly lightened by its use.

The Milwaukee Journal makes a vigorous plea for the adoption of laws that will save the deer in that State from the speedy extinction now threatening them. It says that to be of any use the close season in Wisconsin, Michigan, and Minnesota must coincide, as the animals wander back and forth across the dividing lines constantly. The Journal favors the absolute prohibition of deer-hunting for several years, as the most effective means of restocking the Northern forests, and, failing this, it advocates November as the "open" month, and the exaction of a large license fee from all would-be hunters from other States.

The Windsor Magazine the other day told its readers what Mr. Balfour does before and after breakfast, and what he usually eats at that meal, and gives minute details of his daily ride on his bicycle. Lord Salisbury is described as "prowling" around his house, though his object in doing so is not disclosed. Mr. Gladstone's "gentle breather," up Ludgate Hill some years ago is dug up as a valuable journalistic find, and Mr. Chamberlain's method of going upstairs to bed is faithfully described. Yet the Saturday Review maintains that trivial journalism exists only in this country.

Some inventive genius has suggested to members of the Sioux City (Ia.) Council the advisability of celebrating the completion of the asphalt paving now being laid on the business streets in that city by a grand dance on the smooth topping as soon as the work is finished. The streets where the paving is being laid will be as smooth as a floor, and no better place for a dance could be found. There is some doubt, however, whether the work will be completed before the weather is too cold to make the affair a success.

Li Hung Chang is again in temporary disgrace. He has not been deprived of his yellow jacket or his peacock's feather, but he was reprimanded by the Emperor for making an unauthorized visit to the Empress dowager. Li accepts uncomplainingly all the reprimands and punishments the Emperor has to offer, and holds on to his job as the chief man of the empire.

Austria and Belgium are lowest on the list, their joint tribute to it being only a little over 100.

The use of good, rich river water, neither boiled nor filtered, is the curious advice of Prof. Ray Lankester to people who would avoid cholera and typhoid. F. S. PUETZ, THE MISSING SCULPTOR, DISCOVERED AT JANESVILLE, WIS.

He Wanders Almost Barefooted Through Fields and Across Country, Rolls a Farmer's Baby in a Snowbank, Drives Off with a Constable's Horse, and Is Finally Captured and Locked Up—His Brother Says He Has Been Insane Before.

Frederic S. Puetz, a decorative sculptor, who formerly had a studio at No. 6020 Ellis avenue, who has been missing since Oct. 28, is now in jail at Janesville, Wis., a raving maniac. Such was the information received yesterday by the police of Chicago. His arrest was caused by a farmer, whose baby he had plunged into a snowbank, and after he had tramped fully ten miles on foot through fourteen inches of snow between midnight and 7 o'clock in the morning.

On Monday night Puetz frightened several Janesville families by waking them up at midnight asking for lodging. When denied admission he made no trouble, and apologized for the intrusion. At the residence of R. W. King he left an engraved card in the mail box, and by this his identity was discovered. Early on Tuesday morning he awakened the people at the State School for the Blind, four miles from Mr. King's, having traveled that distance in a snow-storm. He was given something to eat at the school and then struck out into the country. At 7 o'clock in the morning he walked into the yard at John Hanlan's farm-house, seven miles from Janesville, and commanded the men who were working there to quit work.

Drives Off with a Horse.

These men saw at once that he was insane. He was detained until J. E. Gleason, the town constable, could be sent for. Gleason induced Puetz to get into a buggy by telling him they would go to town to get his worn-out shoes mended.

"Now you drive through the gate when I open it," said Gleason, "and then wait for me."

Puetz assented, but no sooner had the gate opened ere he put the whip on the horse and went down the road in a cloud of snow. Puetz drove the horse at top speed for seven miles, then abandoned the horse, striking out across the country on foot.

At John Wood's farm, two miles from where the horse was left, Puetz dashed into the house and seized Wood's baby, which was asleep in its cradle. Mrs. Wood's screamed for help, and when her husband came he saw Puetz bolt out of the house with the child and roll it in a snowbank. He said he was baptizing it. Wood and his three hired men then overpowered Puetz and brought him to Janesville, where he was locked up.

Puetz said he left Chicago on Oct. 28. He had been walking about the country ever since, but did not know where he had been. He expressed himself as anxious to get back to Chicago, and was willing to start at once, barefooted and in the snow.

Has Been Insane Before.

His brother is Tillman S. Puetz, also a sculptor, with whom Frederic lived at No. 206 Wentworth avenue until about a year ago.

Tillman Puetz said last evening: "My brother had an attack of insanity, as the result of an illness brought on by insomnia. That was about four years ago. COOKS INDULGE IN A FATAL QUARREL

Albert Costa Stabs Richard Donovan to the Heart in the Lakeside Restaurant.

Albert Costa and Richard Donovan quarreled at the Lakeside restaurant, Clark and Adams streets, where both were employed as cooks, at noon yesterday and Costa stabbed Donovan, killing him instantly.

Costa is a Mexican. He has been heartily hated by most of the other kitchen employés at the Lakeside, it is said, ever since he went to work there three or four months ago. Donovan bore a good reputation.

Costa had worked for the head cook, William H. Page, at another restaurant, and Page recommended him to Manager Joseph Greenbaum of the Lakeside. Page himself finally grew tired of Costa's interference with the other employés, he said, and quit because Mr. Greenbaum would not allow him to discharge the Mexican. He returned, however, after a few days. Donovan gave notice yesterday of his intention to leave later in the day. During the quarrel which led to his death Donovan said Costa was the cause of his leaving.

George Ehrhard, a waiter, an eye witness of the tragedy, said he was waiting for an order when he heard Donovan say Costa was the cause of his leaving. Then he saw Donovan strike Costa in the face, seize a butcher knife, and start after him as he ran. Being overtaken, Costa turned and the men clinched. There was a struggle and Ehrhard said he turned his face so as to avoid seeing the tragedy. When he looked again Donovan lay upon the floor with blood flowing from a wound in the left side in the region of the heart.

Costa coolly laid the knife upon a table and waited for the police to arrive. According to John Phillips, the storekeeper, he said, "Well, I've done it," and Ehrhard said he turned to those present and said: "You all saw it, didn't you?" and then, when no one answered, "Well, it's all right, anyhow."

Head Cook Page said Donovan was frying potatoes and Costa came along and began to interfere.

"You attend to your business and I'll attend to mine," Donovan was quoted as saying.

Page said Donovan did not strike Costa and did not draw a knife on him.

Policemen Sausman and Loettker arrested Costa, who made no resistance. The East Chicago Avenue Station ambulance conveyed the body of Donovan to Rolston's undertaking establishment, No. 11 Adams street.

Costa retained his self-possession and talked coolly of the killing. He said the other employés disliked him and formed several conspiracies to have him discharged. He corroborated Ehrhard's story. He is 28 years old and unmarried. He lives at No. 88 Dearborn avenue.

Donovan was married, but had recently been living alone at No. 522 West Van Buren street.

"IN WHICH A WOMAN FIGURES" STORIES OF DAILY LIFE

MISS ANDERSON'S HARD JOB;

OR,

How to Reject Ten Girls Who Want to Play Basket ball.

MISS ANDERSON, director of the woman's gymnasium at the University of Chicago, is confronted with a diplomatic problem. The rush of applicants for positions on the basket ball teams has exceeded the demand. Ten "fair co-eds" must be rejected. That number too many added their names to the following placard posted on the woman's gymnasium bulletin board:

> Candidates for basketball teams: please write names below. Teams will practice on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Team practice will be accepted as regular gymnasium work on these days. Teams will not begin to practice until next week.

Miss Anderson was astonished to find the number of applicants large enough to form five teams, when four teams were the limit. The delicate task of weeding out ten anxious young women will be performed between now and next Monday, when the decision will be made. In the meantime great excitement prevails, and all of the new candidates are anxiously waiting to know if they are "strong" enough to play.

A careful physical examination is made of each candidate, her strength is tested in many different ways, and if she is found to be thoroughly strong she is given one valuable credit mark, and the examiner is then consulted. If he reports that she is a good student there is no further question, she is entered, and her name is put on the team having its practice at an hour which does not interfere with any of her recitations.

Miss Anderson said: "A rejected candidate always is bitterly disappointed, and it becomes her leading ambition at once to grow strong enough to be accepted another year. The result is she devotes herself assiduously to gymnastic practice, and in most cases brings her strength up to the required standard. This convinces me that basketball, or any of our games, is good for our women."

Three of the coaches already have been chosen: Miss Tilton, '97; Miss Maclean, '98; Miss Carrol Paddock, '99.

It is understood challenges have been received from other universities. The coaches say their teams will not be "in form" before Dec. 1. Until then no challenge will be considered from an outside team.

A COURTSHIP WITH DEATH;

OR,

Hattie Kenny's Poison-Taking While Discouraged in Chicago.

HATTIE KENNY, aged 22, nearly was swallowed in the miseries of a great city yesterday. Two weeks ago she left her home in Fort Atkinson, Wis., and came to Chicago to find work. She wanted to relieve her mother of the burden of supporting her.

Like many other country girls who come to Chicago on the same errand Hattie Kenny had little idea of the hopelessness of the task she undertook. It was the same old story of a weary search without success.

At 3 o'clock yesterday morning the stranger reached the end of striving. Procuring a bottle of laudanum she swallowed the laudanum and lay down on the wet sidewalk at Peck court and Wabash avenue. As the numbing effects of the potion began to make her forget she suffered she breathed a prayer for herself and mother, then closed her eyes.

Policeman Frank Reich of the Harrison Street Station stumbled over the girl after she had become unconscious. He had her taken to the Harrison Street Station annex. She did not revive as she naturally would have done had cold and hunger been the sole causes of her stupor, and this led the matron to suspect the drug. The young woman was taken to the County Hospital, where it was found she was suffering from a poisonous dose of laudanum.

As she tossed about on her bed she hysterically called for her mother and spoke of how cold the world had seemed to her. Soon she was out of danger and told her story.

When she has sufficiently recovered the police will send her back to her Wisconsin home.

"UNCLE" BOLLAM'S NIECE;

OR,

Mrs. Ringland C. Johnstone's Story of a Deep Laid Conspiracy.

CONSTABLE BOLLAM'S niece, Mrs. Ringland C. Johnstone, gave sensational testimony in Justice Martin's court yesterday. It may lead to Bollam's prosecution by the Fort Dearborn National Bank on a charge of conspiracy.

A week ago Bollam, who has a collection agency in the Atwood Building, caused the arrest of Mrs. Johnstone, who was his stenographer, on charges of conspiracy and forgery. Edward Hursell, a young man employed by a mantel concern in Monroe street, was arrested also at the instance of the constable on a charge of conspiracy. Mrs. Johnstone was formerly Viola Van Ness. Her husband lives at Fortieth street and Michigan avenue. Mrs. Johnstone was defended by an attorney from the Militant Legion. She said she had been instructed by the constable to sign her name to checks, he showing her how to do it. These checks she had cashed, being assisted by Hursell and Walter Laubenheimer, a law clerk. Bollam, she said, told her that he needed the money, and she continued to sign the checks at her uncle's orders.

Then she was arrested and, according to her story, was kept down-town all night without anything to eat until she was forced to sign a statement implicating Hursell and Laubenheimer. Her uncle then told her, she said on the witness stand, that if she would turn State's evidence he would see that she escaped punishment, but that he would have Laubenheimer and Hursell pay him the money he claimed to have lost, amounting to $480, and also force the bank to credit him with the money they had paid out on the checks signed by the girl.

After the testimony the conspiracy charge against Hursell was dismissed and the young man discharged.

Bollam had nothing to say after the woman had finished, but the representatives of the Militant Legion who were present announced their intention of prosecuting the constable as soon as the Johnstone case is settled.

The attorneys for the bank declare that the bank will not pay the constable the money he claims to have lost on the checks.

MRS. MEDINGER'S MYSTERY;

OR,

DORA MEDINGER, who left her husband and her home, No. 219 Dayton street, several weeks ago, is still missing.

Henry Medinger, husband of the woman, and his sister were at the Chicago Avenue Police Station yesterday and had a long conversation with Inspector Schaack concerning Mrs. Medinger's disappearance and her actions previous to that time.

The man reiterated the story he told Capt. Elliott and could advance no theory why his wife should leave him. He said he came home from work the evening of Oct. 21. His wife, he said, appeared in her usual good spirits, and asked him to take care of their child while she went to a near-by grocery to make a few necessary purchases. That was the last time he saw her.

Shortly after this Medinger and his sister moved to No. 98 Burling street, where they are now keeping house. It is said the woman disappeared once before, and some believe she is mentally unbalanced. Others say her home life was unpleasant, and believe she became despondent and may have committed suicide.

Mrs. Medinger's sister lives at No. 163 Dayton street and is not at all satisfied with the theory that her sister wandered away intentionally. There are rumors in the neighborhood to the effect that the woman was foully dealt with, but the police are not inclined to put any faith in this story.

Lieut. Reich of the North Halsted Street Station detailed Detectives Carleton and Facklin on the case yesterday. They visited a number of hospitals and the County Morgue, but were unable to find any trace of the missing woman.

MAY SMILES ON DECEMBER;

OR,

Bernice Fischer at the Marriage License Counter in the County Building.

BERNICE FISCHER, the personification of May, has smiled on Michael Wick, whose 69 winters make him a human December. Bernice is 19. Just why Michael was ungallant enough to let her go alone for a marriage license does not appear in the little story that came out of the frowning County Building yesterday. Be that as it may, the girl went for the document. After trials occasioned by her timidity and embarrassment at the questions she had to answer, she got the license and tripped gayly away to her venerable lover.

When Bernice entered the County Building she looked about in a bewildered manner. Seeing an elevator, she entered it and asked the operator where marriage licenses were issued. She was directed to Clerk Salmonson's office.

When she saw she had to pass a whole row of men clerks, who were footing up taxes, her heart failed her, and she forgot the explicit directions that had been given her. She was seen by the watchman, and telling him her request she was soon conducted to her destination.

Clerk Salmonson long has been used to women making applications for licenses, and he did not think there was anything strange in her request. He gallantly overlooked her blushes and helped her out in giving the necessary information.

"What is your name?" asked the clerk.

"Bernice Fischer."

"Age?"

"Nineteen."

"What is the gentleman's name?"

"Michael Wick."

"And his age?"

"Sixty-nine," said the girl, in a voice that was scarcely audible.

"Beg pardon?"

"Sixty-nine," this time a little louder.

"O, yes; excuse me."

Miss Fischer said Mr. Wick lived at No. 274 West Adams street.

When she received the license she tripped gayly away.

RINGING OF GOLDEN BELLS;

OR,

The Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Miles.

GOLDEN bells rang for Samuel T. Miles and his wife last night at the Hotel Mentone, Dearborn avenue and Erie street. It was the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day. As Mr. Miles is proprietor of the hotel, all his guests felt that they had a share in the party and showered the venerable couple with gifts and congratulations.

Mr. Miles was born in Maryland in 1823, moved to Kentucky in 1826, and came to Chicago in 1890. He married Miss Mary J. Beall in Kentucky. They have five children, two of whom live in Chicago, and four of whom were present at the celebration last night. The festivities were attended by fifty from outside, in addition to the 100 hotel guests. A small table was filled with wedding presents, all with a suggestion of gold, and at the dinner the guests of the house presented the couple with $100 in gold coin, though thirty of them are silver people.

JURY FOR CRONIN SISTERS;

OR,

The Choosing of Twelve Men to Hear a Now Celebrated Arson Case.

THE trial of Nellie and Marie Cronin, accused of arson, attracted a large crowd of spectators to Judge Hutchinson's court yesterday morning. The proceedings in court were apparently new to the sisters, and they were interested. The attorneys resumed the effort begun on Tuesday to secure a jury to try the young women, and before the day was over the following twelve men were selected:

Patrick Donahue,
Andrew Anderson,
H. J. Nichols,
Simon Jessen,
Frank A. Carroll,
C. A. Watts,
H. G. Stevens,
J. H. Siljinder,
Sven Munson,
H. P. Nelson,
John Slattery,
W. H. Hanson.

The opening addresses of counsel will be heard this morning.

Mrs. Van Vlissingen's Experience with a Caller She Thinks a Burglar.

GENERAL Secretary C. D. Lee of the Northwestern University Y. M. C. A. was taken for a robber on Tuesday evening while making a call at the house of J. H. Van Vlissingen, No. 1408 Hinman avenue, Evanston, in the interest of the association. The door of the house he was visiting was not only bolted in his face, but the police were called upon and they sent an officer to the train to meet the man of the house and escort him home in safety.

It all came about through the similarity in sound of the words "Lee" and "me." Mr. Lee called at Mr. Van Vlissingen's house shortly after dark. Mr. Van Vlissingen was not at home, and his wife, who was alone, on hearing the bell, instead of opening the door peered through the glass and saw the shadowy outline of a man.

"Who's there?" asked Mrs. Van Vlissingen.

"Lee," said the man, but he woman thought he said "me."

Mrs. Van Vlissingen, not knowing Mr. Lee and his voice being that of a stranger, became alarmed at what she thought was meant as a ruse.

"Who are you?" she asked.

"It's Lee," again said the man.

"But what's your name?"

"It's Lee."

The now terrified woman ran to the telephone to call the police and to beg them to send a man to the railway station to meet her husband and keep him from being held up or murdered.

Mr. Lee, after waiting a few moments at the door and wondering at his rather cool reception, walked away just in time to escape the police.

INVENTORY OF HER ESTATE;

OR,

The Count of Eureka C. Story-Dunlop's $240,000 Approved in Court.

AN inventory of the estate of Eureka C. Story-Dunlop was filed and approved yesterday in the Probate Court. The inventory shows that the estate is worth $240,000. Of this the real estate is figured at $30,000 and consists of the residence, No. 2011 Prairie avenue. The remainder of the estate is in personal property. Goods and chattels, including jewelry, are put in at $9,991. The stock and bonds include 100 bonds of the Inter-Ocean Building company, $100,000; certificates of deposit, $37,050; two West Chicago Street railway bonds, $2,000; fifty shares of stock in North Chicago Street railroad company, $11,000; ten shares in West Chicago Street railway company, $1,000; fifty shares American Trust and Savings Bank, $5,000; 160 shares Union Manufacturing and Storage company, $13,000; fourteen $1,000 United States bonds, $15,000. There is also a note of $6,000 belonging to the estate executed by Job H. Eastman.

UNGALLANTS IN A BOYCOTT;

OR,

How the Progressive Club Provides Beaux for the Girls.

IF members of the Progressive club are so backward in gallantry that they do not take young women to the parties given by that organization this winter, they are to be boycotted by the club and the girls, too.

At the last meeting of the club a resolution was adopted providing that all such delinquents' names be posted in the clubrooms, and that each young woman attending the parties be given a card containing the names, and the request that she refuse to dance with any of the men indicated.

To give the ungallant lads a further jab it is intimated that they need not propose friends for membership, as blackballing is likely to result.

FOILED BY BRAVE WOMEN;

OR,

Two Crafty Burglars Outwitted in the Moment of Seeming Triumph.

ONE little boy and two men proved too much yesterday for the locks on the doors of Mrs. Albert L. Mrock's abode, first flat, No. 431 South Paulina street. Before she went shopping she bolted every door in the place, and it was only a piece of luck that the thieves who broke in did not get away with her valuables.

On Monday afternoon a boy 10 years old called at the second flat, occupied by Mrs. Newell, and inquired if there were any medical students living there. On being told there were not he went away.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Newell saw the same boy walk by the house two or three times. Finally he came across the street and entered the hallway of No. 431. After a short inspection he went out and waved a handkerchief three times. Then he was joined by two men. The three entered the hall, and the men lifted the boy up to the transom over the door of the first flat. He pried it open with a jimmy. Climbing through the opening he dropped to the floor and opened the door, letting the men in and himself out.

The men found every door in the flat locked. Then they broke the locks and started in to search for valuables.

In the meantime Mrs. Newell notified Mrs. E. Sauva of the third flat that there were thieves in Mrs. Mrock's flat. Mrs. Sauva went out the back way and found Policeman Sherlock of the Maxwell Street Station. He went with her to investigate.

The thieves were still in the flat. When they saw they were cornered they broke the glass from a side window and jumped to the ground, sixteen feet below. One of them sprained his foot and was caught. The other got away.

The thieves had gathered together a pile of clothing and silverware worth $400.

TRIUMPH OF THE MOTHER;

OR,

Jeannette Marion Docherty Ordered Home by Judge Brentano.

JEANNETTE MARION DOCHERTY was surrendered yesterday to her mother, Mrs. Mary J. Docherty, No. 1167 Howard street, by Mrs. Jeannette Temple, the grandmother of the girl.

Jeannette Marion Docherty was brought before Judge Brentano on habeas corpus proceedings. Mrs. Docherty said her daughter, 12 years old, disappeared from her home on Nov. 4 and finally was found at the house of her grandmother, Mrs. Jeannette Temple, in Evanston.

Efforts to secure the return of the child to her own home had met with opposition from Mrs. Temple and from Aggie and Fannie Temple, all of whom were made respondents to the writ of habeas corpus, which alleged abduction.

Mrs. Temple, the grandmother, related to the court that Jeannette had come to her house of her own accord and asked to stay, saying she had been mistreated at home. The witness said she allowed her granddaughter to remain with her, but did not abduct the child and was willing Jeannette should return to her mother if the court so ordered or the girl desired to.

Judge Brentano ordered the little girl surrendered to her mother.

MRS. BOISEN'S REAL DREAM;

OR,

How an Evanston Man's Peaceful Snooze Gave Burglars His Valuables.

SOUNDS of crashing glass roused Mrs. N. Boisen from slumber early yesterday morning in the house No. 1128 Benson avenue, Evanston. Of course she was sure burglars were at work. She awakened her husband and told him of her fears.

"There are no burglars in the house. You have been dreaming," said Boisen, and he rolled over and went to sleep again.

When Boisen proceeded to dress himself at 7 o'clock he found that he was minus his coat, vest, and trousers. They had been taken from a chair beside the bed. Later he discovered that his overcoat was also missing. Boisen found his trousers and coat in the front yard, but was unable to get any trace of his overcoat or vest. The thieves took what money there was in the pockets and also a gold watch valued at $40.

Boisen reported the matter to the police.

WANT THE TORRENS CASE REHEARD.

Chicago Real Estate Board Committee Holds a Meeting and Decides to Petition the Supreme Court.

The former Torrens committee of the Chicago Real Estate Board met yesterday and decided to file a petition before the Supreme Court asking for a rehearing of the Torrens case. This petition will be filed within the necessary thirty days, and if the rehearing is granted the members of the committee are hopeful of a more favorable outcome for the Torrens system of land transfers.

They feel a rehearing would bring forth decisions on all the points of the law, so another one might be framed for the Legislature this winter.

Another development yesterday in connection with the law was the discovery of the employés in the Torrens office that they possibly may receive no recompense for their work. They say they will ask the County Board for their salaries by petition. President Healy expresses opposition to the plan.

Harvey B. Hurd, who drafted the original law submited to the Legislature two years ago and just declared unconstitutional, made a statement based on the decision of the court, in which he said:

"This decision announces a new doctrine as to what is a 'judicial power,' one that will strike down many statutes giving to the officers and agencies of the government what we had heretofore supposed were merely ministerial powers, although the exercise of those powers involves investigations and decisions in their nature judicial—what are called quasi-judicial powers. Of this nature are the powers exercised by the Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners in this and other States.

"Again the latter part of the opinion strikes down the power of the Legislature to enact new limitation laws.

"This decision is so wrong in the particulars pointed out that I think it would be unfair to the court to neglect to file a petition for a rehearing and give the court an opportunity to correct its opinion."

Chief Clerk Moffat, in charge of the Torrens Land Transfer Department in the County Recorder's office, was busy yesterday returning the papers of those who have placed themselves under the working of the law. There were 133 applications for certificates, but not all of that number had taken them out.

Ald. Walker said yesterday he intended to call a meeting on Nov. 21 of the special committee of the Council appointed several months ago to investigate charges of bribery against members of the Council.

The charges referred to are that Ald. Hartwick and other members of the special Railroad committee, appointed to investigate the Van Buren street union loop matter, had offered certain property-owners to make a report against the railroad company for a sum of money.

The charges of attempted bribery made by Ald. William Kent against Ald. John Powers and Ald. Martin B. Madden will also be investigated by the committee.

Ald. Kent, it is said, has informed Ald. Walker that he has several witnesses to substantiate the testimony he will offer when the charges are taken up.

The special committee is composed of the following: Ald. Walker, Chairman; Ald. Gallagher, Ald. Schlake, Ald. Mavor, and Ald. Jackson.

INDIGNATION WANES IN MELROSE PARK

Impression Prevails That Impeachment of Village Officials Will Not Be Attempted as Threatened.

After strong expressions of disapproval about President Thomas and two Village Trustees abetting the attempted prize-fight just outside the village early on Sunday morning the citizens of Melrose Park seem to have buried the hatchet and concluded not to force resignations or impeachments.

"I do not expect anything to be done now," said Police Magistrate Davison yesterday. "There seems to be nobody pushing the case, and I do not think an impeachment will be attempted. Our people were indignant, but I suppose they have cooled down over the matter and will let it drop."

President Thomas' friends say the talk of impeachment was for political capital, as he is a prominent candidate in the race for the Postmastership.

LOOK OUT FOR LOWER TEMPERATURE.

Prof. Garriott Says That a Blast from the Northwest Is Likely to Bring Zero Weather Here.

Chicago's weather menu for this morning is sunshine, with cold on the side and brisk westerly winds for trimmings.

While the temperature yesterday ranged from 31° to 38° it is expected to be considerably colder, as the wave which has swept over the country between Minnesota and Montana moves down upon the lake region. In the center of that wave the thermometer shows 2° above zero, and the chill is creeping this way, says the weather man.

Weather precedents were somewhat shattered yesterday by a freak thunderstorm which visited New Orleans. Prof. Garriott is willing to vote it a gold medal as the biggest novelty in weather this season.

FORGES THEIR NAMES TO GET PASSES.

Ald. O'Malley and Ald. Gallagher Are Searching for a Man Who Has Thus Misused Them.

Ald. O'Malley and Ald. Gallagher are looking for a smooth young man who has been forging their names to letters for the purpose of securing railroad passes.

Several weeks ago a well-dressed young man called upon President Ripley of the Santa Fé railroad and represented himself to be Ald. O''Malley. He requested a pass to Kansas City for his own use. Mr. Ripley was certain that the stranger was an impostor. He told the young man to put his request in writing.

In some manner the schemer secured a business letterhead of Ald. O'Malley, and on this he wrote a polite note asking for the pass. A messenger delivered the note. Mr. Ripley refused to issue the pass and turned the forged letter over to the genuine Ald. O'Malley.

Ald. Gallagher says that a man answering the same description has been singing his name to letters for the purpose of securing railroad passes.

RAID ON THE CLARK STREET TRAMPS.

Police Capture Nearly Fifty and Frighten the Rest Into Abandoning Their Old Haunts.

Clark street from Van Buren to Twelfth was cleaned of all its tramps yesterday afternoon in less than half an hour. The work was done by Detectives Tulley, Schubert, Cruickshank, and Woolridge, while Capt. Koch watched things from a nearby position.

During the last few weeks tramps of all sizes, shades, and color have been flocking to this city from various parts of the country and making their headqaurters in Clark street saloons. Yesterday afternoon numerous vagrancy warrants were procured and then the patrol wagon was brought into use. Saloon after saloon was visited by the detectives and the inmates known as tramps and vagabonds were gathered in and driven to the police station.

In a few minutes the news spread that all the saloons in the street were to be raided and a hurried exit was made by the inmates from all the places. Nearly fifty were captured, however, and these will be arraigned in court this morning.

Arrest of Notorious Women.

Detectives Otto and Madden of the Lake-Front Police Station saw Nellie O'Brien, Annie Farley, and Jennie Clark in Dearborn street yesterday and started to arrest them. Annie Farley succeeded in getting away, but the other two women were captured after a short chase and locked up at the Harrison Street Police Station.

NEW YORK, TOO, DISCARDS DIAMONDS

Leaders of Fashion Who Attend the Horse Show Follow the Example Set by Chicago Long Ago.

A statement was telegraphed from New York yesterday telling of the disappearance of diamonds from the attire of the fashionables who attended the horse show.

Here it is: "One of the remarkable features of the night was the utter extinguishing of the diamond. In never a box was that jewel seen. It was tabooed, discarded, out of sight. The people who could have diamonds to eat three times a day if they wished showed their superiority to the king of gems by not wearing them at all. Now and then a pearl was seen in the ears of some elderly lady of fashion, but a diamond—never. It was a great and notable eclipse."

New York in this, as in lots of other matters, is simply following in the footsteps of Chicago. One year ago THE TRIBUNE printed a story of the "passing" of this gem.

W. B. PETERS TAKEN BACK TO NEW YORK

POWWOW OF MAGNATES.

NATIONAL LEAGUE BEGINS WORK AT THE AUDITORIUM.

Meetings of Members and Board of Directors Are Held, but Main Interest Is Apparently in Trading Players—Many Deals Talked Of but Only One Made—John T. Brush, the Politician, an Important Figure—Tie Vote on Minutes of February Meeting.

There were two men at the meeting of the magnates of the National Baseball League yesterday about whom the interest of the visitors centered. They were John T. Brush of Cincinnati and Chris Von der Ahe of St. Louis. Mr. Brush attracted attention and was closely watched during the day because he is the shrewdest politician of the league and his actions might be decisive in a number of contemplated deals. Mr. Von der Ahe was interesting mostly from a picturesque standpoint.

His "Lieb Vaterland" face beamed with smiles and he appeared in the corridors of the Auditorium early, wearing a pair of trousers of a plaid material, there being three checks in the whole garment. He had a claim before the Board of Directors for $8,000, dating back to the old association days, when he leased the Pendleton grounds near Cincinnati, for which he received no rental from several of the clubs who played there. His claim was passed by the board as not coming under its jurisdiction, but "Der Poss" simply smoked his cigar and said, "Vat I care," and offered "to buy."

Try to Make Trades.

The magnates gathered early in the forenoon, and dickering began at once for trades among the different clubs. Few were completed, and interest centered in the regular meeting, which began at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Briefly stated, the business transacted as given out was as follows:

Reading of the constitution section by section for discussion.

Change of the time of meeting from first Wednesday after the second Tuesday in November to the first Tuesday after the second Monday.

Scratching of Sec. 4 in regard to umpires reporting fines.

Change of the championship from the present limits to a period extending from April 15 to Oct. 15.

Authority for the President or acting Chairman of the league to appoint a committee to report any changes or alterations in the playing rules to the Secretary of the league at least thirty days before the spring or scheduled meeting, copies of the report to be sent to the Secretaries of the different clubs.

Vote on the adoption of the minutes of the February meeting, the vote being tied, 6 to 6.

Official approval of the action taken in the Rusie case, leaving the disposal of that player to the New York managers.

All Want the Best of It.

At the gathering, before President Young called the meeting of the Board of Directors to order, the visitors assembled in groups of two or three about the corridors and a preliminary skirmish was begun to see what men were for sale and, as one magnate was heard to say, everybody "wanted the best of it." Hard bargains were driven and each team seemed to desire to gather into its fold all the good players in sight and get them for the least possible exchange. The discussions were temporarily stopped by the call for the meeting of the Board of Directors at 11 o'clock.

Nothing of importance was transacted at this meeting, according to the directors. There were no protests to come up for decision, although during the season it looked as if the board would need a protracted session to consider them all. Nearly all of them would have affected the standing of the clubs but little, so they were not presented. The pennant was formally awarded to Baltimore and Von der Ahe's claim for $8,000 was decided not to be within the jurisdiction of the body.

After this meeting, while waiting for the regular session of the league to be called, the dickering went on at a lively rate and two of the magnates, in earnest conversation, could be seem in almost every corner. The first announcement was the transfer of Stenzel, Horton, and Truby of Pittsburg to Baltimore for Brodie and Donnelly. Mr. Freedman of New York, stuck close to Dr. Stucky of Louisville, and it was learned that Connaughton and Clark had been offered for Clark of the Louisville team, but the Falls City people offered either Clark or McCrea for Rusie.

At this Mr. Freedman threw up his hands and declared that Rusie was New York's property and would remain so, that he was not for sale and would not be, despite the offers for him. Mr. Brush also circulated freely among the assemblage, seemingly with propositions, but nothing was announced at that time.

Regular Meeting Is Called.

The call of the league meeting stopped the rush of the baseball tradesmen, and nearly all adjourned to the room on the second floor where the meeting was called to order by President Young.

Several of the members came back and remained in the lobby, among them being Mr. Von der Ahe, Mr. Brush, Dr. Stuckey, and one or two others. The session lasted from 2 o'clock until nearly 6, and at its close President Young announced that little had been done and gave out the routine report of the work as told above, with the exception of the vote on the minutes of the meeting of the Board of Directors in New York a short time ago.

This proved to be an interesting contest and one upon which a great deal depends. The question came up on the call for the minutes of the meeting, but President Young had forgotten to bring them along, so they became a matter of memory.

At that time the rules stood so the National League by a majority vote could amend the governing rules, but amendments were presented by members of the board, among them one reducing the membership from five to four, and the final article of the agreement was amended to read by a majority vote of the board. At the same time the board decided it had no jurisdiction in the row between Minneapolis and Indianapolis, with which Mr. Brush was intimately connected, but jurisdiction" in similar cases was voted. The minutes of this meeting came up for approval, and there was a difference of opinion in regard to them.

The last article which read, as was asserted by some, that amendments could be made by a majority of the board was disputed and the word "league" insisted as the one which should be there.

The question finally came to a vote, Col. J. I. Rogers of Philadelphia moving to correct the minutes in these particulars. This was lost by a tie vote and it became necessary for a vote on the approval of the minutes and this, too, resulted in a tie vote, 6 to 6, and thus the minutes are neither accepted nor corrected, but are still an open question.

Lively Discussion Ensues.

It was asserted by some that the last article in which the words "by the majority vote of the board" are contained was never read, members asserting they would not have consented to its passage had they heard it. Others said they had heard it and a lively discussion ensued, with the final result as already narrated.

Mr. Brush then left the meeting. By the motion, which would have been approved with the acceptance of the minutes, the Indianapolis and Minneapolis clubs might have been relieved of their part in the national agreement which they desired, and the two clubs might, if circumstances were favorable, obtain the control of the other franchises of the Western League.

By this arrangement the board could do almost anything it chose by simply voting itself suitable jurisdiction in the matter, taking away from the league in general a power which belonged to it.

Growing out of this matter is another lively row which is in prospect, and that is an attempt to throw Brush out of the Board of Arbitration. As a member of this board he sits in judgment over his own team, Indianapolis, and, of course, is favorable to Minneapolis, which is with the Hoosiers in their Western League trouble. It is asserted by other members of the league that such a proceeding is altogether wrong and one which must be remedied. In this connection it is said Mr. Soden and Mr. Byrne will also go out. A. G. Spalding is mentioned as a successor to Brush, but he is credited with saying he will not go in if he has a chance. James A. Hart is now spoken of as the likely man to succeed the Cincinnati magnate. Mr. Hart said last night Mr. Spalding had nothing at all to do with the Chicago club, as he is its President, and it is therefore reasoned that he will go in if either of the two are suggested. Who will succeed the other two is not decided by those who are endeavoring to size up the situation.

Abell Has a Scheme.

Mr. Abell of Brooklyn was one of the new arrivals yesterday, and said Brooklyn had many men to trade if the team could be bettered thereby. He has a new scheme for the facilitation of trading off players. As he views it, the situation could be much simplified by releasing all players Jan. 1, and then allowing a grand rush for the most desirable men, the highest bidder taking the prizes. He wants a rule passed making it irregular to sign a player before March 1. Mr. Abell's idea will not be viewed with any favor by the league magnates officially, although many of them think it a "good thing" in a joking way.

Many ball-players drifted into the Auditorium during the day, and met friends of other clubs. Among them were "Chick" Frazer of Louisville, Fred Pfeffer, "Scrappy" Joyce, Dr. Harley Parker, and a number of the Western League players and representatives. Fred Pfeffer and Mr. Freedman of New York met in the writing-room shortly after noon, and the Chicago second-baseman looked at the magnate from Gotham for a moment, as he approached, but Freedman happened to see Pfeffer, and he turned on his heel in a second and walked away. Many noticed the slight, but Pfeffer commented slightly on it and passed it by. However, Joyce and Pfeffer exchanged friendly greetings.

Dahlen is also a man desired by two or three clubs, but from the present prospects he is likely to remain with the Colts.

The meeting of the league adjourned until 10 o'clock this forenoon, and by this afternoon it is thought many of the plans in contemplation will have crystallized, and many of the players desired by different clubs will either be traded off or be sure of their positions with the club now owning them.

Kerr Confirms the Report.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—President Kerr of the Pittsburg club, who is ill, confirmed by telephone today the report Stenzel, Horton, Truby, and O'Brien will go to Baltimore in exchange for Brodie and Jimmy Donnelly.

President Kerr was not pleased over the way the story leaked out. The deal was closed Oct. 22, but Ned Hanlon bound the Pittsburg management not to say anything about it until he wired his consent. But Ned forgot to telegraph and the secret was held too long, so he gave it away in Baltimore yesterday.

Jimmy Ritz, a local player, died today from typhoid fever. He played at Nashville and New Orleans of the Southern League, and with the Washington, Pa., Inter-State League team. He was once tried at third base by the Pittsburg league team.

BRUSH'S SCHEME MEETS DEFEAT.

Western League Representatives Convene at the Victoria.

The Western Baseball League convened in annual session yesterday at the Victoria Hotel. After a deal of talking, which generally centered about the avowed efforts of John T. Brush to gain control of the league, the last meeting adjourned towards midnight, having accomplished almost nothing. Mr. Brush's plans, as carried out by the Minneapolis and Indianapolis clubs, for dividing the surplus in such a way as to shut out the poorer ones, was defeated, and to this extent the Cincinnati magnate was beaten at the first bout.

However, the majority, for all it has protested loudly in public against what has been characterized as officious meddling and even tyranny on Brush's part, was not disposed to push the advantage.

During the morning the directors—Charles Comiskey of St. Paul, John Goodnow of Minneapolis, G. A. Van der Beck of Detroit, and Mat Killilea of Milwaukee—met, and after reviewing the official score, decided to award the championship to Minneapolis. Not a protest was considered, and none was entered, although many have been threatened from time to time. But they would not have affected the result however they were decided.

During the hours between the adjournment of the Board of Directors and the first meeting of the league many reports were circulated about concerning the efforts of Mr. Brush to capture the two places vacated in the Western League by the expiration of the year franchises of Columbus and Grand Rapids.

To further strengthen his hand it was said he, or, rather, his supporters in the league, would endeavor to capture the greater portion of the surplus for the season—a fund that is formed by turning into it 10 per cent of all the gate receipts, and which has heretofore been divided equally among the eight clubs of the league.

W. F. C. Golt of Indianapolis and John Goodnow of Minneapolis urged these measures before the Westerners, but they were met with a stout rebuff. Their motion to squeeze out the smaller clubs was defeated by a vote of 6 to 2, thus leaving the old rule in effect.

Before taking up the election of officers for the new year it was necessary to fill the two vacancies. Applications were received from the retiring clubs, Columbus and Grand Rapids, and from Des Moines and Toledo. It had been understood that Omaha would bid for a place—this, too, in furtherance of Brush's scheme—but no such application was considered by the directors.

While it is the general belief among those familiar with the inner affairs of the league that Columbus and Grand Rapids will be elected to succeed themselves, thus making no changes in the league for the coming season, no action was taken last night prior to the adjournment at 10 o'clock until 11 o'clock this morning.

HATLEY WILL CONTINUE PLAYING.

Close Contest in the Roomkeepers' Billiard Tournament.

The series of games in the roomkeepers' tournament was continued last night at Rhines' room between Rhines (210) and Clarke (130). The game, although a long one, was exciting, Rhines losing by four points, being cheated of his first victory by a kiss after he had made two points in his last inning, Clarke needing but one to win. The score:

Clarke [130]—0, 3, 4, 0, 0, 0, 3, 6, 1, 8, 9, 3, 2, 0, 0, 1, 2, 6, 0, 1, 0, 3, 3, 5, 6, 2, 8, 0, 7, 4, 0, 3, 0, 8, 9, 1, 13, 3, 1, 0, 0, 4, 1, 4, 4, 2, 0, 1—130. High run, 13. Average, 2 34-48.

Rhines [210]—4, 0, 1, 3, 3, 0, 13, 0, 0, 2, 1, 0, 0, 2, 26, 4, 0, 0, 0, 30, 4, 15, 5, 0, 2, 0, 0, 17, 3, 0, 0, 3, 1, 0, 1, 1, 21, 14, 0, 2, 0, 0, 0, 6, 2, 18, 2—206. High run, 30. Average, 4 18-47.

The game tonight will be played at Parker's between Capron (260) and Perkins (260).

At the meeting of the contestants which was held prior to the game it was announced Mr. Carey of the Superior Billiard Hall would enter in place of Mussey, and that Hatley would represent Mr. Carey. Hatley will commence playing next Monday night.

Mr. Helm created another surprise by informing the meeting he would have to withdraw from the tournament, as he was about to take up his residence in Cleveland. It is probable, however, that Helm's successor in his old room will play out the schedule. The tourney will proceed to a finish even if the room is not represented.

A report was current last night that Louis Bensinger will inaugurate a shortstop tournament at his rooms as soon as the roomkeepers' contest is ended.

GARDINER OUT WITH A CHALLENGE.

Desires Races with Either Bald or Tom Cooper.

Arthur Gardiner is now out with a challenge to either E. C. Bald or Tom Cooper for a series of three unpaced races, the distance to be one mile, two miles, and five miles, for a purse of either $1,000 or $2,000 for the series, the winner to take all the purse, races to be run within thirty days after the articles are signed. The track, or at which point the races shall be held, is immaterial to Gardiner, and the only condition he imposes is that the men start from opposite sides of the track, both riding in the same direction. He has deposited the sum of $500 forfeit money with Mr. George Stewart, President of the Thistle Cycling club. Upon acceptance of the challenge he will immediately deposit with Mr. Stewart the balance of the agreed stake. This offer remains open for two weeks from date.

BREAKS THE SEVEN MILE RECORD.

Little Michael Takes Another Mark Into Camp at New Orleans.

New Orleans, La., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Little Michael, in an attempt at the ten-mile world record today, placed a new mark for America for the seven-mile record, taking one second off his mark of 13:10, going in 13:09. His ten-mile time was five seconds slower than yesterday. Today's was 18:54 1-5, thirteen seconds outside the world record. The failure may be attributed to the pacemaking.

Coulter's Record Accepted.

The principal item of interest in the bulletin of the League of American Wheelmen's Racing Board this week is the acceptance of Clinton R. Coulter's record of 1:59 1-5 for a mile, unpaced, professional class, made at Denver, Colo., on Oct. 2.

Associated Cycling Clubs' Meeting.

The Associated Cycling Clubs will meet in the Old Colony Building at 8 o'clock on Monday night

SEE THE TEAM PRACTICE.

EVANSTON STUDENTS INSPECT THE WORK OF THEIR ELEVEN.

Northwestern University Football Players Open the Gates to the Public, Allowing All to Witness the Play Against the Dental College—No Regular Game Scheduled, Visitors Being Coached by Potter from the Side Lines in Order to Try Tactics.

The Northwestern University football team lined up against the team from the dental department of the university yesterday afternoon at Evanston.

There was no regular game, the "dents" facing Van Doozer's men only for the practice. Potter coached the dental team, which played a good defensive game, but was powerless on the offensive against the Evanston line.

All the regular team were out and all are in fairly good shape. The men are inclined to look with suspicion on the result of the game between Chicago and Lake Forest. They have an idea Stagg's men are trying to play "'possum." At any rate they took no risks and the practice yesterday was the hardest and fiercest it has been for a week.

The cloister-like secrecy that has brooded over the grounds for several days, when the gates were locked as tightly as those of a treasury vault, was dispelled for the day and scores of students watched the conflict from the side lines.

HEAVY TRACK SPOILS THE RACING.

Mudlarks Have a Good Day at Ideal Park.

Seven bookmakers at Ideal Park were sufficient to accommodate the diminishing crowds yesterday, several "bookies" and a number of the sports having departed for New Orleans, where the winter racing begins on Saturday.

Continuous heavy track for the last week has enabled the talent to get a line on the mudlarks and select the winners more successfully. Three heavily backed favorites won yesterday. Newsgatherer, at odds-on in the first race, could do no better than run second in an ordinary field. Newsgatherer cost J. J. McCafferty over a thousand dollars as a yearling and was entered in all the rich Eastern stakes of last summer. He proved a great disappointment and sold for $700 at McCafferty's recent sale in New York. The summaries:

BIG GAME FOR CHICAGO.

MINNESOTA CHALLENGES MICHIGAN TO PLAY IN THIS CITY.

Is Willing to Accept Any Date Ann Arbor Team May Name—Game to Decide the Championship of the West—Advisory Board of Athletic Control Decides Not to Interfere with Minnesota-Wisconsin Contest Nov. 21—Regarding Saturday's Dispute.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—The Minnesota football team today wired a challenge to the Michigan team for another game to be played in Chicago before Dec. 1. The Minnesota team is willing to accept any date that the Michigan people may select. The Advisory Board of Athletic Control at the university today decided to raise no objection to the Minnesota-Wisconsin game on Nov. 21. Capt. Harrison and Coach Jerrems made the following statement to the board:

"In the second half of the game between Michigan and Minnesota, after Capt. Harrison had carried the ball over for a touchdown, it was punted out and 'a fair catch' made by Loomis between sixteen and twenty yards from the goal line. Harrison demanded that the Michigan team should line up ten yards back of the line, where the catch was healed. Donnelly, the referee, would not allow this, but permitted the Michigan team to line up on the line where the catch was healed. Minnesota objected, and insisted that the rules stated that the opposing team should not come within ten yards of the line on which the free catch was made. Donnelly refused to listen and also to take out time for Minnesota to look for the rule, saying that he knew the rules, as he had helped to make them."

The second protest says that in view of the above statements of facts and from other evidence of unfairness on the part of Referee Donnelly the Advisory Board of Athletic Control of the University of Minnesota protests against the published score of the game, and records a belief that a fair and sportsmanlike ruling might have altered the results.

YALE UNABLE TO GET A GAME.

Carlisle Indians and Lafayette Decline to Play Next Saturday.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Yale has been unable to get a game here Saturday. The Carlisle Indians have refused a challenge and so has Lafayette. Yale's management has sent half a dozen challenges to minor college elevens without avail, and it is probable that Yale has played its last game till the Princeton match on Nov. 21.

Paul Dashel of Lehigh was today appointed umpire for the Princeton contest. The other officials are not yet decided. Connor was out today and played well at left half. He will play in the Princeton game. Gilmore and Hinckey will not be able to play before Saturday. Hinckey's attack of tonsilitis is severe.

The practice this afternoon was taken in a pouring rain, but the first eleven held the ball well. Vance McCormick arrived today and coached the backs. Mr. Hartwell, Yale's head coach, will referee the Elizabeth-Orange game in New York Saturday.

HARD PRACTICE FOR PRINCETON.

Scrubs Hold the 'Varsity Team Down to Two Touchdowns.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Active practice at Princeton in preparation for the Yale game was begun this afternoon.

The 'varsity lined up against the scrubs and were put through a hard twenty-minute game. Rain fell all through the practice and there was a good deal of fumbling caused by the slippery condition of the ball.

The scrubs showed up surprisingly strong and held the 'varsity down to two touchdowns. Cochran, Kelly, and Baird were out of the game today. Cochran and Kelly are recovering from injuries, while Baird was allowed to rest, as Trainer McMaster is afraid of his becoming overtrained.

LAKE SHIPPING NEWS.

Freights and Charters.

CHICAGO—It was reported that boats were offered at the close of 'Change at 1⅝ cents on corn to Buffalo. Business was dull, the only charters being reported were the Parnell and Robert Mills for corn to Buffalo.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Charters—Hope, Fitzpatrick, Ira Owen, Chicago; Iroquois, Choctaw, Milwaukee, 30. The elevators here are filling up. There is a scarcity of cars, and, unless receipts fall off, the situation will be very bad. Vessels are now being compelled to wait under the breakwater until their turns come at the elevators.

CLEVELAND, O.—Coal cargoes for the head of Lake Superior are being offered freely, but as down loads are scarce owners are slow in sending their boats to Duluth. To Ashland 35 cents has been paid, and vesselmen are holding for 40 cents to Duluth. Ore freights are very dull. Charters—Coal—Parks Foster, Erie to Milwaukee, 30. Wheat—Spokane, Duluth to Buffalo, 2¼. The boats of the Bessemer company will be laid up as fast as they arrive down, and all will be out of commission within ten days.

Around the Lakes.

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 11.—The steamer Ionia, in leaving port with coal, went hard aground at the Red Can. The water in the bay is low.

MUSKEGON, Mich., Nov. 11.—Between 40,000 and 50,000 feet of lumber, mainly twelve-inch boards, have come ashore here tonight. There are no other signs of wreckage.

ASHTABULA, O., Nov. 11.—The steamer German struck a rock in one of the slips last night and punched a hole in its forward compartment. It will go to Cleveland to be docked as soon as it is unloaded.

HOUGHTON, Mich., Nov. 11.—The steamer Arnold went aground in the Portage Lake Ship Canal near the entrance at noon today. It was released two hours later by tugs from here, and, as the bottom is soft, it sustained no injuries.

STURGEON BAY, Wis., Nov. 11.—The new fire boat, built here by Riebolt, Wolter & Co. for the City of Milwaukee, was launched today in the presence of a large delegation of Milwaukee City officials and prominent citizens. The new boat will be known as the August F. Jansen.

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., Nov. 11.—The steamer Folsom, with the barges Nelson and Mary B. Mitchell in tow, left port this morning light. While making the turn at Windmill Point, in the strong gale which was blowing, the towline from the steamer to the first barge became slackened and it became entangled in the steamer's wheel. All three boats then drifted on to Windmill Point. The bottom is a flat rock and the anchors could get no hold. There was little damage to be anticipated from the sea, but when the water goes down it is thought the stranded boats will be left high and dry. A tug was sent to the Folsom's assistance at noon, and it was released with the Mitchell and went to Prescott. Nothing could be done to the Nelson, which is hard aground. She is broadside to the shore on solid rock, and will be probably two feet out when the wind goes down.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 11.—The Queen City again holds the record for large Lake Superior cargoes. It was taken from her by the Sir William Siemens, but the Queen City has gone her 93 tons better. The cargo consisted of 66,283 bushels of oats, 50,360 bushels of corn, and 95,326 bushels of wheat. The Siemens had 174,500 bushels of wheat, which weighed 5,235 tons, and the Queen City's load weighs 5,328 tons. Capt. Lyons thinks this record will hold good for the remainder of the season. The tug Cheney of the Maytham line was caught in the current today and struck a dock, doing $300 damage to itself. The Nellie Mason has lightered 300,000 feet of lumber and has gone to Black Rock, where it will finish unloading. The Captain of the schooner Young says that its rudder and shoe are gone and the stem twisted. It will have to take off all its cargo and will then be out two feet. The Saranac struck the Tifft Farm bridge today, doing considerable damage. The water in the creek is high and a heavy current is setting up stream. Tugs are having difficulty in shifting vessels. The wind is a gale from the southwest.

BACKACHE.

A Very Significant Indication of Organic Derangement.

The back, "The mainspring of woman's organism," quickly calls attention to trouble by aching. It tells with other symptoms, such as nervousness, headache, pains in loins, and weight in lower part of body, blues, and "all gone" feeling, that nature requires assistance, and at once. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for twenty years has been the one and only effective remedy in such cases. It speedily removes the cause and effectually restores the organs to a healthy and normal condition. Mrs. Pinkham cheerfully answers all letters from ailing women who require advice, without charge. Thousands of cases like this are recorded:

"I have taken one-half dozen bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has relieved me from all pain. I cannot tell you the agony I endured for years; pains in my back (Oh, the backache was dreadful!) and bearing-down pains in the abdomen extending down into my limbs; headache and nausea; irregularity. I had grown very thin, a mere shadow of my former self. Now I am without a single pain and am gaining in flesh rapidly."—MATTIE GLENN, 1561 Dudley-st., Cincinnati, O.

LOVE TURNS AWAY.

The Increase of Bachelorhood and Spinsterhood.

ILL-HEALTH VERSUS MARRIAGE.

To the social philosopher, one of the most discouraging tendencies of the times is the disposition of young men, and especially city-bred young men, to remain single and grow up to old bachelorhood. In the crowded Eastern sections of our country the percentage of bachelors and spinsters to the total population is tremendous.

A wise old physician in discussing the situation said:

"You will observe that this tendency is in the main confined to the large cities and thickly settled communities. The young men are by no means blameless, but innocently the young women are also at fault. The fact of the matter is, that city and town-bred girls are too frequently semi-invalids, without fully realizing it.

"One of the saddest things in life is to watch young women commit slow suicide. Of course they don't know what they are doing. Starting with good health, strength, and good looks, everything ahead of them seems promising. But they don't know how to live and take care of their own health. Their mothers are mainly at fault. They bring up their daughters in an atmosphere of false delicacy and in utter ignorance of the anatomy distinctly feminine and its all-important functions.

"These young women study Latin and Greek, go in for mathematics and ethics, but are faulty in their habits of eating, breathing, walking, sleeping, dressing, and working. Worse than all else, they are as ignorant as unborn babies of the real and sublime importance of capable motherhood, and of the graver results that follow neglect of the delicate organs that make it possible. Moreover, Health is Beauty, and Health is Happiness. Where there is health there is always amiability and some degree of beauty. There may be a sickly imitation of it, such as we see but too frequently on the city streets and in the city drawing-rooms. But this transient hothouse loveliness of the invalid is such as to excite pity, sympathy, and consideration, but not to awaken love in the heart of robust, hard-headed young men.

"And the consequence. Girls grow up to womanhood and pass on into unnatural spinsterhood, because of their ignorance of the importance of the health and welfare of the womanly organism. They suffer in silence from weakness and disease that rob them of their health, their beauty, and their capability to perform the duties of wifehood and motherhood. They imagine, in their pitiful ignorance, that the ills from which they suffer are inherent in all women. They do not understand that health is the normal tendency of nature, and all illness abnormal.

"From these innocent sufferers love turns aside. The young man who is worth marrying is ambitious. He looks forward to making a fortune in business, or a name in a profession. He understands that he cannot live always, and dreams of perpetuating that fortune or name in a line of healthy, capable descendants. He wants a healthy wife, who will preside amiably in his home, and be a capable, motherly mother to robust and promising children.

"That kind of a young man, and it is the only kind fitted for young husbandhood, shies at the evanescent beauty of the semi-invalid. He has seen invalidism in the homes of his friends, and if he is a city-bred man has seen little else, and with modern hard-headedness wants none of it. While waiting for his ideal the habits of bachelorhood become fixed, with the result, as in France, that the government may soon have to drive men to marriage by a tax on bachelorhood."

There is no necessity for this deplorable state of affairs. If all young women were taught by their mothers the supreme importance of the perfect health of the organs that make wifehood and motherhood possible, invalidism among women would soon be a matter of ancient history. There is hardly a disease, either general or local, from which women suffer that does not have its inception in weakness of the distinctly feminine organism. The suffering wife and mother, racked with pain, petulant, sickly, and unfitted for the duties of life, is only at fault in so far as she is ignorant of her own physical makeup and the importance of her womanly health. If she will take the proper care of herself and resort to the right remedy any woman may be a healthy, happy, capable wife and mother, and in some degree beautiful.

For all weakness and disease of the delicate organs that bear the burden of maternity, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a safe, sure, and speedy cure. It acts directly on these organs, making them strong and healthy. It allays inflammation, soothes pain, and stops all debilitating drains. It banishes the discomforts of the period preceding motherhood and makes baby's coming almost painless. It insures the health of baby. It transforms a weak, nervous, sickly, fretful woman into a robust, healthy, happy, and amiable wife and mother. It does away with the necessity for the embarrassing "examinations" and "local applications" so objectionable to modest, sensitive women. Thousands of women have testified that it is the best of all medicines for suffering women. Those who wish to know more about it should write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. All good druggists sell it.

For her own sake and that of her children, every woman should have and read Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. It is the best home medical book ever written. It contains 1,000 pages and 300 illustrations. Several chapters and illustrations are devoted to the reproductive physiology of women. It is written in plain, everyday language, with no confusing technical terms. It contains prescriptions and advice invaluable to women. IS CHILLED BY CABLES.

WHEAT LOSES TWO CENTS OF ADVANCE MADE ON TUESDAY.

Liverpool Not Responsive to Bull Sentiment Here—Russian Conditions Not So Bad After All—Statistics All Favorable to Holders—Disadvantages of New York as a Grain Export Port—Estimate on the North Dakota Wheat Crop—Street Markets.

The wheat market was just as sensitive and nervous as on Tuesday, but instead of closing in calls closed within the range of puts. Liverpool did not respond to the advance on this side and there was no conspicuous buying for foreign account. While there was a great volume of bull news the foreign announcements were not so uniformly and unanimously favorable to higher prices as on Tuesday. People who were inclined to believe that there was but one side to the market were given suggestions of the other side. The Corn Trade News cabled that according to official Russian reports the conditions there are better than expected. A private cable explained that the increase in Russian offerings was due to the fact that ocean freights from America are much higher than from Russia. Locusts are said to have damaged the Argentine crop 33 per cent, with the harvest only three or four weeks away. Further export engagements for Australia were reported by San Francisco.

Wheat Receipts Are Light.

The routine statistics were favorable to holders. Primary receipts were 557,000 bu, while shipments of wheat were 461,000 bu and of flour 69,829 brls. Clearances were equivalent to 324,000 bu. New Orleans cleared 43,000 bu. The two principal Northwestern markets had 411 cars, against 1,182 a year ago. Local receipts were only 40 cars, as against 70,000 bu taken out of store. On the breaks here the outside domestic markets became decidedly weak. The local business included 80,000 bu of No. 2 spring, most of which was sold in the pit on short receipts. Most of it was taken by Norton-Worthington, presumably for shipment. Small lots of No. 2 red were sold, the premium free on board running up to 10c in some cases. The average price on samples was about 1c lower than on Tuesday. The closing Liverpool cable quoted a decline of ¼d on futures, while spot wheat was up ¼@½d. Paris was the equivalent of 1¾@2¾c higher, and Berlin was up the equivalent of 1¾@2¼c a bu. The continental quotations were disregarded, but the inclination shown by Liverpool to lag was the occasion for weakness on the money curb and one of the reasons for the first break. There was considerable realizing early. On the decline the appearance of a fair buying interest caused a scare among shorts and a rally in December to 80⅝c bid, the best price of the day. The weakness during the last half hour was occasioned by the Russian announcement. It was a rather illogical market, with the trade only in moderate volume and fluctuations hard to follow.

Corn Heavy Despite Bullish Factors.

Corn was heavy, and latest prices showed a decline of ¾c. Holders were inclined to realize because of a weaker feeling in wheat. The independent news was bullish. Receipts were exceedingly small at 94 cars, and only 118 cars are expected for today. Cables were ¼d higher. Exports were fair at 301,276, 140,000 bu of which cleared New Orleans. The cash demand was good, there being scarcely enough of fresh arrivals to supply the local consumptive demand. White corn especially was in brisk demand. Samples of old corn were steady and new corn ½c higher. Carlots to go to store were easier. Vessel room was taken for 160,000 bu. No. 2 yellow was held 3¾@4c under May. Receipts at primary points were 300,300 bu; shipments, 490,200 bu. Local withdrawals from store were 95,711 bu.

Realizing sales weakened oats, and the close showed a loss of ⅝c. Seaverns was a large seller and New York sold. Receipts were moderate at 125 cars, and 157 cars are expected today. Exports were 82,000 bu. The shipping demand from the East was slow. Offerings by sample were very light and this kept prices steady.

Sales on track and f. o. b. coarse grain included: Corn—No. 4 at 23½@24¼c; No. 3 at 24¾@25¼c; No. 3 yellow at 24½c; No. 2 at 25⅛@25¾c; No. 2 yellow at 25¾c; No. 2 white at 25¾@26¾c. Billed through: No. 4 at 22c; No. 3 at 24½c; No. 2 at 23½@25¼c; No. 2 yellow at 24½@25c. Oats—No. 3 at 18@18c; No. 3 white at 18½@21¼c; No. 2 at 19¼@19½c; No. 2 white at 22@23½c. Billed through: No grade at 12½@16¾c; No. 3 at 16@18¼c; No. 3 white at 18½@20¾c; No. 2 white at 22@22¼c.

The market for provisions was dull and without features. Fluctuations were within the narrowest ranges. The hog receipts and the estimate were large enough to cause an easy tone.

Rye was steady with offerings light. No. 2 store sold at 39½c and No. 3 at 38c. December ranged at 40@40¼c. May sold at 44½@45c, closing at 45c sellers.

Flaxseed ruled steady. Receipts were 22,620 bu; shipments, 6,960 bu. No. 1 sold at 78½@79c and Northwestern at 79c. December ranged at 78½@79½c, closing at 79c. May sold at 83@84c, closing at 84c.

Barley ruled firm. Offerings were relatively light. Feed grades ranged at 24@25½c. Common to fair malting ranged at 27@29c, and good to choice at 31@38c.

Timothy seed was steady. December was $2.60 and November $2.55. Clover seed, common to good, ranged at $4.50@8.25. Bran sold at $7.00.

New York Recognizes Competition.

In an article in the New York Journal of Commerce telling of improved facilities furnished by the Brooklyn Wharf and Warehouse company, the competition of other Atlantic ports and the Gulf ports particularly is recognized. The following comparison of free on board prices is submitted:

CORN FREE ON BOARD NEW YORK.

	Cents.
Market price of corn at Chicago Nov. 4	28⅞
Lake rate to Buffalo or Erie	2¼
Rail rate, Buffalo or Erie to New York	5
Charges transferring to steamer at New York	1¼
Cost free on board New York	37⅜

CORN FREE ON BOARD NEW ORLEANS.

Market price of corn at St. Louis Nov. 4	26⅞
Freight rate St. Louis to New Orleans	6
Charges transferring to steamer at New Orleans	1¼
Cost free on board New Orleans	34⅛
Cost free on board New York	37⅜
Difference (if ocean freight rate is the same) in favor of New Orleans	3¼

With regard to the steadily increasing Southern grain business which is a subject of vital interest to Chicago receivers and elevator men, David Bingham of New York is quoted as follows: "The direct freight from St. Louis to New Orleans by the Mississippi River is 6c per bu, with which the railroads to New York cannot compete. This enables New Orleans to sell corn 2@3c per bu cheaper than New York. Full cargo grain steamers usually come out in ballast, and in the winter time the great bulk of these steamers will go to Newport News and Norfolk in preference to New York on account of the lower port charges they have to pay at those ports, and because they have to take the Southern route in any case to avoid the ice, and the distance therefore is not a material consideration. And they will go to New Orleans for a very trifling additional freight. Galveston is able to sell as cheaply as New Orleans and is bidding for business. Another consideration in favor of these Southern ports is that vessels loading at them get cotton, which helps them in loading grain. Mobile also is trying hard to get trade."

Trade Gossip on 'Change.

A series of pictures for vitascopic exhibition at the Paris Exposition in 1900 were taken on 'Change yesterday morning showing the wheat pit and other features of the board in action. The exposures were made by George Lawrence of the Chicago Colortype company for J. A. Finnerty, acting for the French Government. Eighty small powder magazines were suspended from different parts of the ceiling and ignited by electric wires. The cameras were located in the northeast corner of the building. The blinding flash when the exposures were made startled the boys in the pit, and some sitting in the call-room tumbled over each other in trying to get out, thinking that some dynamite explosion or other accident had occurred. Six photographs 25 by 30 inches were taken with an exposure of 1-100 part of a second. They make the largest photographs of the largest room ever taken.

Puts on December wheat ranged at 76¾@77¼c and calls at 81@81¼c. Puts on May corn sold at 28⅝@29c and calls at 29@29¼c.

The failure of Clapp & Co. of New York was announced yesterday. The trades of the firm with Chicago houses were all evened up some days ago.

Hoffman, who has had charge of the jobbing business of Lipton & Co., has gone with the packing house firm of Miller & Hart. This firm will probably be represented by a man in the provision pit.

A St. Paul dispatch to Logan quoted A. R. Dalrymple as follows: "The crop of North Dakota is 22,000,000 bu, only 7,000,000 bu now to come forward all told. Duluth receipts will hold about 100 cars until Nov. 20 and after that drop off, as elevator companies have stopped shipping from interior elevators and won't fill over one-half their capacity."

The high price so far reported for a membership is $950, paid a day or so ago.

Estimated receipts for today are: Wheat, 57 cars; corn, 118 cars; oats, 175 cars, and 40,000 hogs.

The following bearish statement of opinion comes from a letter received by a St. Louis milling company from a Glasgow importing house under date of Oct. 31:

"We don't know of any unfavorable prospects in the Argentine at present and there is certainly no absence of a crop in Russia, however inferior the crop in Australia may be. Don't allow yourselves to be carried away by the large quantities bought for India. They were bought for speculative purposes. They may find their way there, but it is just as likely that having been used for influence, they may ultimately find their way to the United States."

Options opened weak under disappointing cables and general unloading, rallied sharply at noon on reported export buying on the Pacific coast, but collapsed finally owing to a cable reporting only 88,000,000 bu deficiency in Russian crops this year. Cottonseed oil, steady; demand light.

Coffee, options opened barely steady, with prices 5@10 points lower under heavy receipts at Brazilian ports, which offset steady European advices. Baltimore buying was met by local and foreign selling, causing generally weak undertone. Closed easy, unchanged to 15 points net decline. November, 10.10@10.15c; December, 9.90@9.95c; March, 9.90@9.95c. Spot coffee, Rio quiet; easier; No. 7 jobbing, 11¾c; invoice, 10¾c; mild, quiet; Cordova, 15@17c.

Butter—Extra Western creamery in light supply, and with a fair demand and firm Western advices prices were advanced to 20½c. Firsts are selling at 18½@19½c. No change in lower qualities.

Eggs—With light receipts of strictly fancy stock, coupled with a very good local demand, prices advanced to 24c for closely graded stock.

Cotton—The future delivery market opened 2 to 3 points lower, followed by a further break of 7 to 8 points; later prices fluctuated within 5 points of the noon quotations, and closed quiet at 3 to 9 points decline from yesterday's final figure. Liverpool advices were unfavorable, which turned prices downward. Spot cotton in the Southern market, as well as at Liverpool, showed a declining tendency. Yesterday's shipments to Great Britain, France, and the continent aggregated 67,000 bales. The scarcity of freight room has scarcely interfered with the outward movement of cotton from the ports. All freight room obtainable is engaged up to the first of next year, and the continued scarcity of unchartered vessels keeps the rates firm at the highest prices. Liverpool cables reported a good business doing there in spot cotton, with total sales of 12,000 bales, including 10,500 bales of American cotton. Prices were easier, but without quotable change in rate from yesterday, with middling still quoted at 4 19-32d. The receipts were 36,000 bales, including 31,800 bales of American cotton. Futures opened there easy at 3-64d decline and subsequently sold off 2-64d additional, finally closing barely steady at a net decline of 4½d to 5d from yesterday's closing prices. Manchester—Yarns quiet, but steady. Receipts at the ports today were 41,424 bales, against 44,105 bales this day last week and 32,100 bales last year. On the spot the market was quiet at 1-16c decline. Middling uplands at 8¼c, and do gulf at 8⅝c. Sales, 69 bales for consumption and 300 bales on contract. Today's sales:

MOORES MAKE AN OFFER.

WOULD GIVE THEIR NOTES IN SETTLEMENT TO BROKERS.

Paper Running Two, Three, and Four Years, for $350,000 in Payment of Match and Biscuit Claims—Brokers May Accept the Offer Today—Total Liability on Present Quotations Is Nearly $3,000,000—Sterling Rates Are Strong.

The brokers interested in the Diamond Match and New York Biscuit deals of William H. and J. H. Moore met in the office of the Moores yesterday to discuss terms of a settlement. The meeting lasted from 3 o'clock until 5 o'clock and the entire situation was gone over thoroughly. The Moores made an offer of settlement and the brokers are too meet again at 3 o'clock this afternoon to decide whether they are to accept it or not. The Moores offer to relinquish all claim they may have upon the regular stock now in the hands of the brokers which was bought for their account and to give their personal notes running two, three, and four years for the margining of the Diamond Match stock down to 200 and for margining Biscuit stock down to 80. This would involve notes amounting approximately to $350,000. The Moores announced in the meeting all of their own personal assets had been swept away in the speculation except a house and lot owned by William H. Moore and valued at from $30,000 to $40,000.

The question of the liability of the pool members was discussed at length and the Moores announced as their belief none of the members of the pool could be reached by law. They explained the method of buying stock and how the interest of the members of the pool varied from day to day and that, too, without one member of the pool knowing exactly how the other members stood in their relations to the Moores. A great many questions were asked by the brokers present and the Moores were free in giving information. The Moores said in the course of their explanations that there were but two courses open to their creditors. One was to accept the terms they offered and the other was to bring suit for the amount of the claims held against them and to take the property they had, which, as they explained, consisted of the Michigan avenue residence property. They said on the terms of settlement offered by them they would be given four years in which to work out their own salvation, and this they felt confident they could do providing they were given the opportunity. They explained that the four years would be required in which to be able to pay the notes which they offered in settlement.

Liabilities on Present Quotations.

The most interesting development of the meeting was the one that the liabilities of the firm of Moore brothers, figured on the basis of the present quotations for Diamond match and New York Biscuit stock, were a little less than $3,000,000. It also developed in the meeting that the regular Match stock now in the hands of the brokers stood the brokerage in from 160 to 180. The stock when bought had been margined down to these figures by the Moores. The Diamond Match stock bought in the account had been purchased for the most part around 222. While the Biscuit stock had been bought at 92 or in that neighborhood. Except for the stock bought on Saturday and Monday preceding the failure there had been margins deposited of ten points in Match and five points in Biscuit. This would bring the Match stock down to 212 and the Biscuit stock to 87 on an average and would mean notes from the Moores for 12 points in Match stock and 7 in Biscuit.

Following the meeting one of the brokers who is most largely interested said: "The brokers will accept the proposition of the Moores in my opinion. We have looked into the matter thoroughly and we have become convinced the members of the pool cannot be held responsible. The accounts are so involved in character that the pool members could be held liable only after long litigation, if at all. In that view of the matter I have become convinced the best if not the only thing left for us to do is to accept the proposition of the Moores and definitely settle the accounts with them. If we should bring suit against the Moores themselves we could only get the property they have in their possession. This would only be a drop in the bucket and I would rather take my chances on having the notes paid than to bring suit and get practically nothing."

Banks May Hold the Stock.

There was a story in financial circles yesterday to the effect the banks which had made loans to the Moores on Match stock had agreed to hold this stock for a stated period to give the Moores an opportunity of recouping a portion of their losses. If the brokers accept the terms of settlement of the Moores and the banks hold the stock for a stated period there is a chance that the Moores may succeed in saving enough from the wreck to make part payment on their notes before the first year has expired.

The 6 per cent dividend upon the preferred stock of the International Packing company, declared by the directors at their meeting on Tuesday, had the effect of strengthening the stock of that company in the local market yesterday. There were sales of preferred stock at 50 and of common at 30.

There is an issue of $1,500,000 of preferred stock, $1,000,000 of common stock, and $1,250,000 of debenture bonds. The company is doing well, according to the reports of officers, and in addition to earning sufficient to pay the dividend declared, the company has a considerable surplus to be used in retiring debentures. The dividend declared is for the nine months that have elapsed since the reorganization of the company, and it will be paid Nov. 19 to stockholders of record Nov. 12.

Local stocks yesterday were not so strong as on the preceding day. West Chicago sold at 97 to 98, Diamond Match from 142 at the opening to a close at 138¾, North Chicago at 229, and Lake Street at 22¼. New York Biscuit sold up to 64 and closed at 63.

Sterling rates were strong yesterday owing to a scarcity of bills. The rates yesterday were as follows:

IN THE NEW YORK MONEY MARKET.

Disposition of Leading Operators to Force a Reduction.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The volume of business in stocks was somewhat below the recent average today and the railroad list still maintained its leadership in point of activity as a group, although the banner record was made by American Spirits. The course of prices evidenced clearly a continued disposition on the part of leading operators until recently prominent in the upward movement to force a reaction. Their argument is that the rise has progressed in a fashion and to an extent that has encouraged what is technically termed "pyramid" buying by operators on small margins. In other words, speculators with a little money have used their profits as margins for further purchases and have endeavored to protect themselves by stop orders. Conservative traders always regard this element in the speculation as a menace to the market and usually apply heroic treatment to bring out the weakly held stocks.

The gossip and news furnished the street was conducive to a moderate reaction, and in addition the market was depressed late in the day by unfounded reports of the death, or at least serious illness of Cornelius Vanderbilt. London prices were lower to the extent of sharp fractions, and arbitrage houses offered stocks for foreign account. A number of traffic reports for the first week in November were unfavorable, including that of the St. Paul, showing a decrease in gross earnings of $190,000. The annual report of the Manhattan railroad was fully as discouraging as had been expected and the stock was the weak feature of the market, the publication of the report being anticipated by a decline of 3¼ per cent. Some disappointment was also expressed over the disproval of recent circumstantial theories and rumors in connection with the election of the new Board of Directors. The stock subsequently rallied 2 per cent, but closed within a fraction of the lowest price. In view of the temper of the street, the declaration of the regular quarterly dividend on Burlington, the formal agreement of the representatives of the Ohio soft coal railroads to form a new organization for three years, and revived indefinite rumors of a settlement in the Tobacco fight failed to affect prices. On the other hand a sufficient number of outside buying orders appeared, especially in the low-priced stocks, to moderate the downward movement in the general list.

In some stocks, notably American Spirits, Chicago Gas, and Northern Pacific preferred, strength was displayed at intervals. Sugar was the especial point of attack in the late session, and yielded 1⅝ per cent despite favorable trade news. There was a fair activity in the specialties, with Flint and Pere Marquette making the widest fluctuations. The closing was weak at about the lowest prices, with net concessions of ⅛@1¼ per cent in the active stocks.

Railroads were fairly firm on lessened dealings. The usually inactive issues scored material gains. Peoria and Pekin union seconds, 10; International and Great Northern seconds, 5; Chesapeake and Ohio R. and A. second consols, 4½; and Louisville and Nashville, New Orleans and Mobile firsts, and Louisville and New Albany firsts, 4 per cent. The sales were $2,318,000.

Governments were dull but firm on sales of $9,000.

IN THE FOREIGN MONEY MARKET.

Stocks Irregular, Fluctuating Widely, but Close Better at London.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The Evening Post's London financial cablegram says:

The stock markets today were irregular, fluctuating widely, but closing better. Home rails were the best market. There was also a smart rally in mines.

American bonds were bought, but shares were dull, though closing firm.

The Bank of England is discounting on the terms stated yesterday, but the money market keeps firm on the short supply of money, besides other causes. The revival in home trade is absorbing cash. Half a million of Japanese money was released at the close today.

The prevailing money rate today in the open London market was 3 11-16 per cent. A considerable sum was borrowed by the market from the Bank of England. One of the features of the market was the allotment of India Council bills at 1s 3 27-32d, which compares with a rate of 1s 2⅞d a fortnight ago. This advance is explained by the fact that money is very dear in India.

In Paris the market was dull, and in Berlin quiet.

Purchase of Water-Works.

Wabash, Ind., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—Application will be made to the General Assembly of Indiana at its next session for the passage of an enabling act which will admit of the purchase by the Wabash City Council of the Wabash water-works system, now owned by a company of New-Yorkers.

NEWS OF THE RAILWAYS.

HOPE NOW FOR THE 5,000-MILE INTERCHANGEABLE TICKET.

Central Passenger Committee Will Further Discuss the Matter at a Meeting to Be Held Nov. 19—E. A. Ford of the Pennsylvania Lines Favors the Proposition—Santa Fe Officials Not Cast Down—Other News in Brief.

For years commercial travelers have been clamoring for the adoption of an interchangeable 5,000-mile ticket by the railroads in this country. Thus far, however, all attempts to bring about the issue of such tickets have been defeated, the railroads claiming it would subject them to too much trouble in dividing the proceeds from those tickets and securing to each road the proper amount to which it would be entitled.

There is now a chance that a 5,000-mile interchangeable ticket will soon be adopted by the Central Passenger committee, which includes all lines between Chicago, St. Louis, and the Western termini of the trunk lines. General Passenger Agent E. A. Ford of the Pennsylvania and Vandalia lines, at yesterday's meeting of the committee in the Great Northern Hotel, Chicago, introduced and strongly urged the adoption of a resolution embodying a system of 5,000-mile tickets, to be sold at $100 each, to be issued by the Commissioner of the Central Passenger committee and to be made good over all the lines members of that committee. A special meeting to consider further the whole subject and to adopt a comprehensive plan for the issue of such tickets, as suggested by Mr. Ford, will be held in this city on Thursday, Nov. 19.

SANTA FE OFFICIALS FEEL HAPPY.

Think Unconstitutionality of Alien Land Law Will End Receivership.

Santa Fé railroad officials are elated over the discovery made by Judge Horton of Topeka that the act upon which the alien land receivership is based was not constitutionally passed and is therefore null and of no effect. Aldace F. Walker, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the company, who arrived in the city yesterday, says he expects the suit against the company will be immediately withdrawn by the parties who instituted it. Any attempt on the part of the receiver appointed by the Oskaloosa Judge to take charge of the property will be resisted by the company. Some years ago, Mr. Walker said, a case was brought against a Kansas road under the same act and in that case the same discovery was made, and it was on that account thrown out of court. Concerning the parties who instigated the attack on the company and the motives which inspired them opinions differ. One report has it that it is the result of a conspiracy by Eastern and Western capitalists to cause a reduction in the price of Santa Fé stocks and bonds and then make a fortune on the markets. Others think it was instigated by members of the committee which so strenuously opposed the regular reorganization plan in order to embarrass the new management. The opinion in Topeka is that it was an attempt to blackmail the company into paying a disputed claim of some Kansas politicians.

WILL TERMINATE RECEIVERSHIP.

Chicago and Northern Pacific Will Be Sold in This City Next Tuesday.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 11.—The rolling stock, franchises, and property of every kind and description of the Chicago and Northern Pacific will be offered for sale at public auction at the Harrison street station, Chicago, next Tuesday. If the plans of the Wisconsin Central companies have miscarried the sale will mean much to that system, but it is part of the reorganization plan, it is stated, that the Chicago terminal property become a portion of the system.

The sale will be in charge of Henry W. Bishop, Special Master in Chancery. The purchase price will be $10,000,000, unless the plan proposed to the Chicago and Northern Pacific bondholders falls through and an attempt is made to secure the property by the people back of the Wisconsin Central reorganization. The purchasers will also have to assume two mortgages, which are preferential, one running in favor of the City of Chicago, covering the station property particularly for $650,000, and one for $394,000 in favor of Edwin A. Abbott and John A. Stewart.

RAINER WILL REMAIN IN CHARGE.

Central Traffic Weighing and Inspection Bureau Is Doing Good Service.

Paul P. Rainer will continue to run the Central Traffic Railway and Inspection Bureau. The meeting of traffic officials yesterday decided to take no further notice of the complaints of a few disgruntled parties, alleging that the bureau had outlived its usefulness. Mr. Rainer has had charge of the bureau ever since it was organized, and through his energy and diligence has saved the associated roads very large sums of money, out of which they would have been defrauded by unscrupulous shippers. The conclusion reached was that the association could not abolish the bureau, which in the past had proved of such great value to them, or dispense with the able and efficient services of Mr. Rainer.

RIGHT TO USE FORTIETH STREET.

Supreme Court Sustains the Union Stock-Yards Transit Company.

The Supreme Court on Monday handed down a decision in the case of the city against the Union Stock-Yards Transit company, sustaining the right of the company to maintain its tracks on Fortieth street.

The company, it is said, will refuse to elevate its tracks and fight the question out in the courts.

At a meeting of the Council Committee on Track Elevation yesterday afternoon Chairman O'Neill was instructed to prepare at once ordinances for the elevation of the tracks of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern and the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago railroads between Sixty-third and Sixty-seventh streets.

SHORT STORY OF THE DAY.

TIME FOUND HER OUT.

He loved her. He meant to tell her so, and the moment for doing so had come. The fluffy golden head was very near, a few words had been spoken—when the door opened and Ella Stanton entered.

A frown clouded the brow of Dr. Ralph Stanton, the eminent young physician who everybody declared would make his fortune in his profession, and pretty Nellie Saville escaped, glad to hide her flushed cheeks from her cousin's jealous eyes.

Mrs. Stanton threw herself languidly into the depths of an easy chair. "So I have found you at last, my dear Ralph. I have been seeking you for the last hour."

He hated this woman in spite of her dark, witching beauty. His uncle had found that beauty irresistible, and by a late marriage robbed his nephew of the quarter of a million which he had taught him to expect would one day be his.

"What did you want with me?" he asked curtly.

"You are cross. I wanted your society; nothing more. Is there anything strange in that?"

"Most flattering of you, my dear aunt, I am sure."

It was Mrs. Stanton's turn to frown.

"Don't call me by that hateful name. If I did marry your uncle, you might remember that I am not yet 25. By the way, Nellie Saville quits the teens next week."

"Indeed!"

"Yes. Charming girl, isn't she? Really, Ralph, if you should see the dismal hole of a parsonage where that girl's parents live you would feel grateful to me for my compassionate generosity in taking her from it for a little while. Are you going to Lady Campbell's this afternoon, Ralph?"

"No, I detest tea and tennis."

"So do I. Besides, I have a headache. Will you prescribe for me?"

After the majority of Mrs. Oakbrook's guests had departed for Campbell house Dr. Stanton was pacing the lawn with Sir John Dobby, smoking cigarets and talking politics; and indoors his relative occupied a velvet lounge and tried to read the last new novel.

He came to her at last; but it was with a serious face and an open telegram in his hand.

"My sister has met with an accident. Levison wants me to go at once."

"O, Ralph! Is it serious? You will return here?"

"I think not," he returned, replying to the latter question.

"You will come to Melton Willows at Christmas, Ralph?"

"I really cannot promise. Good-by."

She sat there until the sound of the horse's hoofs had died away, then she crossed the room and looked at the notes he had written. One was for his hostess—apology and explanation, of course—but the other was for "Miss Saville." A moment's hesitation—then she tore it open.

"Dear Miss Saville: Before you see this you will know the reason of my sudden departure. But I cannot wait until our next meeting for the answer to the question I should have asked you this morning if Mrs. Stanton's entrance had not prevented me from doing so. I want you to be my wife, Nellie—my loved and honored wife. Will you? Write yes or no soon to your loving but impatient Ralph."

A small fire burned in the grate. She put the letter into her pocket, and burned the envelope.

"Dear Ralph," murmured the lady. "I want you to write to him for me, Nellie. He promised to let me know how his sister was, but I suppose he has not had time. He does not know your handwriting, I think."

Very soon Ella Stanton had dictated a gushing, affectionate letter, and with blanching cheeks Nellie had written it.

"Don't close it now, Nellie. Throw it aside. There is only one other that need be written now."

"What is it?" Nellie asked, a trifle wearily.

"Why, you know, dear, Mr. Graham wants me to open the Brixton bazaar, but I really don't feel equal to the task. I must write to decline, but he always laughs at nerves, and I do so hate being laughed at."

"My Dear Friend: I have thoughtfully considered the subject, and must decline the honor. I am grieved beyond expression to disappoint you, but, feeling as I do, I cannot act otherwise. However, I feel confident that you will meet with one worthier than I—that what I cannot grant she will joyfully concede. Only one thing I ask—that this shall in no way interfere with the friendly relations which have always existed between us."

"I think it is making too much of a little thing, Ella. You will sign it, of course?"

"No, dear; do it for me. Only initials. How singular that they should be alike, is it not? Ella Stanton. Elinor Saville. There, now, dear, just run up-stairs and see if Louise has mended that lace I tore last night."

A moment more, and Ralph Stanton's simple, honest letter lay open before her. Jealousy had quickened her memory. She knew it by heart.

Refolding it, she inclosed it with that other in an envelope addressed in Nellie's pretty, graceful, calligraphy to "Ralph Stanton, Esq.," and sealed it carefully.

It was necessary to destroy the missive originally intended for Ralph, and to indite another one to Mr. Graham if discovery was to be avoided.

Two years later Dr. Stanton was journeying northward. The London season was over, and the famous physician had been on the point of starting for his holiday, when he was summoned by telegram to Sir Christopher Knott, a wealthy patient brimming over with gout and crotchets.

Thinking! It was dreaming! Dreaming of a slim, petite figure and fluffy golden hair, and gloriously blue eyes. Yes, though she had refused him, he loved her still. Her home was at Grimstone.

Would he see her? What folly! Doubtless she was married, and, if not, had she not told him in the cruel little letter, which was even now in the breast pocket of his coat, that it could never be?

"Grimstone! Grimstone!" shouted a porter, and so his reflections came to an end. But only to awaken into lively interest. From a second-class carriage a girl alighted—a girl in a neat little hat and gray dust cloak. Underneath that hat was a piquant little face and clustering fringe of fluffy golden curls.

Nellie was alone in the drawing-room. Suitors had wooed in vain. She was the orthodox clergyman's daughter, with her duties to perform as they rose fresh each day, and in the past a nameless disappointment.

Her thoughts had turned on that visit to Oakbrook two years ago, when the waiting maid brought in a card, "Dr. Stanton."

"This is, indeed, a pleasant surprise," she said, with a rosy flush that told its own story. "I am sorry mamma is not at home."

"I am staying in the neighborhood, professionally and could not leave without calling on you. It is the privilege of friendship, and you desired that we continue friends."

Nelle looked puzzled. "I do not understand you. What do you mean?"

"I beg your pardon for the allusion, Miss Saville, but you cannot have forgotten? The words were in your letter—a letter I have kept because you wrote it, in spite of its contents."

"Indeed you are under a mistake. I never wrote to you in my life."

"Then you never wrote this or received this?"

And he placed in her hand the two unfortunate letters.

When the primroses looked like stars in the grass and the air was filled with the odor of violets a wedding took place at Grimstone Church. And three months later a society journal announced that Mrs. Stanton, widow of the late George Stanton, Esq., of Melton Willows, Berks, had bestowed heart and hand upon Count Horrenza, an impecunious Italian nobleman.—Odds and Ends.

CHARITABLE WORKERS TO CONVENE.

State Conference at Springfield of Men and Women Interested in Helping the Needy.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 11.—[Special.]—A State conference of men and women interested in charities of a public nature and in the reformation of criminals will hold its first session in Springfield on Thursday morning. The conference will be held under the direction and auspices of the State Board of Commissioners of Public Charities and will be the first meeting of this character ever held in the State.

For many years it has been the notion that in the matter of public charities there could be nothing in common between Cook County and the other portions of the State, and on this account no attempt has been made for united action of the various organizations. Cook County has built up a system of its own, more or less effective, but not at all perfect, while the other counties have worked in a haphazard sort of way without a system. In the country the results obtained from the money spent in the way of public charity have been gauged solely by the ability of the men who have had the funds in charge.

The object of the coming conference is to have the Cook County people and those from the other counties of the State meet and by a general exchange of ideas give each other the benefit of whatever experience they have had. In this connection the reports of the auxiliary boards of county visitors will be of special interest. These boards were appointed under the new lunacy law by the present State board and each consists of three prominent persons, whose duty it is to visit and inspect local institutions and make recommendations in the same manner and in accordance with the rules of the State board.

The auxiliary boards, it is claimed, have already done much good work among the jails, poorhouses, and similar institutions, and have caused reforms of a local character, the necessity for which would have escaped the State board. Chicago's auxiliary has been particularly active. It consists of Dr. Sanger Brown, a well-known Chicago alienist; Allen Lester Fowler, an attorney who is greatly interested in charitable work; and Mrs. Lorin C. Collins. The report of the Cook County auxiliary will probably be presented by Dr. Sanger Brown.

In case Gov. Altgeld returns to the city in time he will deliver the address of welcome Thursday morning. The response will be by Dr. Arthur Reynolds, President of the State Board of Charities. Papers will be read at the morning session by Mrs. Lucy L. Flower of Chicago, trustee of the State University at Champaign, and Judge Orrin N. Carter of Chicago. Mrs. Flower will discuss the care of neglected and dependent children, and Judge Carter's paper will be on "The Legal Status of the Dependent Child."

At the afternoon session Dr. Brown will present a paper on provisional treatment of the insane, and it will be followed by a discussion in which Dr. F. H. Kimball of Rockford, Judge Carter of Chicago, and Dr. Elizabeth Mathews of Springfield will participate. "The Principle of Charity Organizations in Towns and Villages" is the subject of a paper that will be read by the Rev. C. R. Henderson of the Chicago University, and the Rev. J. L. Duncan, Secretary of the Streator Association of Charities, will tell of the progress that has been made in charitable work in that city during the last year. A discussion of the last paper will be opened by Philip W. Ayers, Secretary of the Chicago Bureau of Charities. The session will close with an exhibition by pupils from the State Institution for the Deaf and Dumb at Jacksonville. In the evening an address will be delivered by Jenkin Lloyd Jones and papers by Dr. Julia Holmes Smith and Miss Jane Addams will be read.

Dr. Clarke Gapen of Kankakee will talk on "State Care of the Insane" on Friday morning, and this subject will be generally discussed. Dr. D. R. Brower of Chicago will lead the discussion. "The Poor Farm from a Physician's Point of View" will be the subject of a paper by Dr. George F. Mead. The discussion which will follow will be lead by Dr. M. H. Cleary of Galena. Prof. Bamberger, Superintendent of the Judd Sterret Manual Training School of Chicago, will speak on the subject "How to Make Manual Training Most Effective in the Education of Neglected Children."

Dr. Frederick H. Wines of Springfield, Maj. R. W. McClaughry of Pontiac, and H. H. Hart, Secretary of the Minnesota State Board of Charities, will speak at the afternoon session. From 3 to 5 o'clock a reception will be given at the Executive Mansion.

CONVOCATION OF MOTHERS OPENS ITS SESSIONS AT HANDEL HALL.

Many Charged with the Direction of Little Ones Imbibe Kindergarten Philosophy Under the Auspices of the Chicago College—Mrs. J. N. Crouse Presides at the Meetings—Mrs. William Kent Gives the Results of Her Experience.

To learn of others and to tell others what they have learned regarding child nature is the object of the multitude of mothers attending the third annual convocation of mothers, of which the opening session was held in Handel Hall yesterday morning.

Mrs. J. N. Crouse, director of the Chicago Kindergarten College, under whose auspices these convocations are held, welcomed the large audience present at the opening session.

Mrs. J. H. Van Vlissingen of Evanston read the first paper. Her subject was "Physical Environment of Infancy."

Mrs. Fred Bagley's essay on "The Child in the Home" was followed by the Rev. L. P. Mercer, pastor of the New Church in Van Buren street, who talked of "The Spiritual Environment of Children."

AT THE CONVOCATION OF MOTHERS.

Mrs. Harriet C. Robbins spoke on the subject of "Influence of the Nursery Maid on the Life of the Child."

Mrs. H. A. Kasten's paper on the "Necessity of Separation Between Mother and Child" treated the subject briefly but comprehensively.

"Coöperation of Mother and Teacher" was the theme of Mrs. W. H. Chappell's paper. She urged upon the mothers the necessity of insight on their part, to bring about more ideal conditions.

The reading of this paper and a general discussion closed the first session.

Afternoon Session Draws a Crowd.

Every chair in the audience room of Handel Hall was filled long before 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when Mrs. Crouse again stepped forward from among the palms which ornamented the platform and introduced Julia E. Bulkley of the University of Chicago. The subject, "Pedagogical Study of Early Childhood," was ably handled by this woman, who has devoted so many years to the study of the development of the minds of children.

As the time drew near for Prof. John Dewey's address, which followed Miss Bulkley's paper, the galleries were filled and the aisles packed by eager women who came in late and breathlessly asked: "Am I too late to hear Prof. Dewey?"

And during his speech standing-room only was to be found.

Address of Prof. Dewey.

Prof. Dewey began by saying: "As this is a convocation of mothers, I suppose an apology is due from me in that I am only a father."

The speaker told of child life and development as divided into four distinct periods:

First, dawning and gradual control of physical forces.

Second, period of occupation.

Third, conception of purposes.

Fourth, period of adolescence, during which he becomes critical of his relations to other people and of other people's relations to him. A time when the child is given to introspection rather than retrospection.

Mrs. Andrew McLeish led in the discussion which followed Prof. Dewey's talk.

Miss Amalie E. Hofer, editor of the Kindergarten Magazine, which is published in Chicago and is the national organ of the work, spoke briefly on "The Use of the Law of Continuity in the Development of the Child."

"If you live the largest, broadest part of your daily life with your children," said she, "all the theories will be added unto you."

Words of Mrs. William Kent.

Mrs. William Kent, wife of Ald. Kent, was then introduced and before commencing her paper on "The Child and the Law" said:

"I, as an amateur among a group of specialists, feel much difficulty in addressing this audience. I speak from the limited experience of a mother of four children, none of whom are over 6. But if, in striving to work out with them the principles which we are here to vindicate, my experience has given me that which will help other mothers of little children, I am glad to speak.

"I feel keenly," said Mrs. Kent, "that the education that we can give our children in the first twelve months counts for much in their development. It is here that we see the lack of insight in most nurse maids; there is hardly a good nurse that does not long to pick up and rock a little baby that is crying simply to be taken up and wants to be held all the time. At the same time this same nurse may be impatient with the peevish whinings and unreasonable demands of the same child two years older, traits that are directly the outgrowth of the earlier stage, when they were humored. We do not begin soon enough to recognize and respect the personality of the baby. He is never a doll."

Mrs. Kent's paper was brightened by anecdotes so true to life that every mother in the audience looked at her neighbor and smiled as she remembered some similar episode in her own experience in the training of her children.

Mrs. Washburne Closes.

Mrs. Marion Foster Washburne, without whose presence a Chicago mothers' meeting would be "Hamlet" with the melancholy Prince left out, gave the closing address of the first day's session. Her subject was "The Imagination and Its Relation to Right Conduct."

"There exists in every one of us a faculty," she said, "as common and as precious as daylight. By means of it we 'make believe' that things are as we wish they were. In the childhood of the race, before asceticism was dreamed of, the imagination easily played its double part and ministered as willingly to the fun-loving propensities of the people as to their religious needs. To them religion and pleasure were not antagonistic but harmonious. Perhaps the Greeks, most artistic of all nations, furnish the best example of the joy-bringing power of a purely natural and unspoiled imaginative faculty. Children are temperamentally Greek. Untrammeled, they will use their imaginations as the Greeks used theirs. Plato was the first great thinker to recognize the importance of children's plays and to see that the characteristics developed in this form of mimic life were of the utmost significance to the State. In his republic he carefully planned the plays of the children who were to make the future citizens of his ideal democracy.

"After him, by many centuries, Froebel caught the thought and enlarged and deepened it. He saw that the plays of children were the spontaneous forms into which they cast their activities, and that the form reacted upon their souls.

Play's Use in Teaching.

"A fundamental principle," continued the speaker, "is that the truths which reach children through the medium of play meet with less resistance and more easily become a part of the child's nature than those which reach him by longer and harder routes.

"Between Plato and Froebel came a long line of stern and unsmiling teachers, who thought that the child, in order to be fitted for life, must be made to acquire information in the most disagreeable manner possible. 'This life is hard,' they grimly reasoned, 'and he who would resist its temptations and weather its storms must early acquire toughness of fiber. He must be willing to sit long hours in a cramped attitude, and study dry and unattractive subjects with a resolved mind and unwavering attention, else will he never be seasoned for the harder duties that await him.' With exactly the same force might they have reasoned that since in future life these children would be required to lift and carry heavy weights, therefore it would be well early to bind upon their growing backs the loads which would test their mature strength."

Yesterday's attendants at the convention were not all mothers. There were bevies of bright young teachers. And there were a few men.

A reception to the mothers was given at the college rooms, No. 10 Van Buren street, last night.

Mrs. Josephine C. Locke gave a short talk on "How to Help Children to See Beauty in Nature and Art."

READY FOR THE ANNUAL CONVENTION.

Miss Frances Willard Arrives in St. Louis to Preside Over the National W. C. T. U. Meeting.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 11.—Many of the delegates and most of the national officers have arrived to attend the twenty-third annual convention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which meets in Music Hall on Friday morning and will be in session for six days.

Miss Frances E. Willard, the President, who came in last night, met today with the executive officers of the national body on business pertaining to the convention. Five hundred accredited delegates and as many more visitors are expected.

Miss Willard, in an interview today, told a representative of the Associated Press that her annual address will be printed after rather than before the convention. The time Miss Willard had reserved for the preparation of this address was devoted to the relief of the Armenian refugees at Marseilles, which work claimed her entire time and strength up to the hour of her departure from Southampton.

Miss Willard plans to go to Castile, N. Y., immediately after the St. Louis meeting, where she will complete the address.

HE SPEAKS FOR FLOWERS.

S. CHOYO, WITH A CHRYSANTHEMUM SETTING, TALKS OF JAPAN.

Feature of the Display Is His Enthusiasm for the National Bloom of His Islands—Large Crowd Attends the Exhibit and Admires the Fine Collections—More Awards Are Made and Roses Attract Considerable Attention.

No picture ever had a more suitable framing, no scene a fitter sitting than Prof. S. Choyo has in his corner of the Second Regiment Armory, where he gives informal talks every afternoon and evening during the chrysanthemum show on the distinctively Japanese art of floral arrangement.

Standing in an extemporized garden of chrysanthemums, the national flower of his native land, he is a veritable high priest of beauty. For him, if a thing is not beautiful it is worse than nothing. Nowhere could be found a more genial man. His face beams with a radiance like that of the rising sun emblazoned on his country's flag.

How the chrysanthemum came to be the national flower of Japan is one of the interesting things Prof. Choyo told his audience yesterday afternoon. He has a soft, pleasing voice, and a musical, low laugh, which breaks out here and there unexpectedly as he speaks.

"Our little empire in the east of Asia is called the land of the rising sun," said he. "I suppose it is because that is where the sun rises for Asia—over Japan. The first symbol of that idea was the half-disk, representing the rising sun, in brilliant collor on our flag. This was altered later by adding the sun's rays. Then after many generations this grew into the full round sun with rays all around.

"Artists depicted this symbol in conventionalized forms, and in some of these forms the similarity to the chrysanthemum was noticeable. So the chrysanthemum was adopted, first by artists, and then by all the people, and at last officially as the national flower of Japan, the common symbol of the sun, emblem of the empire."

Flowers Opened Japan's Gates.

After his audience had plied him with questions and learned all they wished to know about the culture of the chrysanthemum, from its original beginnings in the red, yellow, and white varieties of daisies of Japan, Prof. Choyo sat down and laughed quietly to himself for a few minutes, and then talked to a reporter for THE TRIBUNE somewhat as follows:

"It is hard for me to talk when so much noise is going on. Isn't it singular?" and here came a ripple of laughter that would have driven away the most obstinate fit of the blues.

"It was the flowers of Japan that opened the gates of our country to civilization. Botanists and biologists became interested in our flora, and were the first ones to find out anything about Japan and let the rest of the world know.

S. CHOYO.

"Flowers are wonderful. Flowers are the greatest thing in Japanese art. They ought to be used more everywhere. No other decoration is as cheap or as beautiful or as ennobling. If a man loves a beautiful flower he will love a child or a small animal. If he doesn't love these things there is something cruel about him—yes, something bad.

"That is why I like to show people what beautiful effects can be produced by arranging flowers artistically. See this group. Here, high above the rest of the larger flowers, is this half-opened bud on its long stem. That means hope. So there is a thought in every flower."

Prof. Choyo smilingly explained that his surname, Choyo, is the name of a saint day, or festival day, in the Japanese calendar, and it is the day set apart by them each year consecrated to the chrysanthemum. It is the ninth day of their ninth month, and from the name of the day the name of the flower, in Japanese, has come to be the same word, Choyo.

Cut Roses Exhibited.

In the twin armories all the afternoon crowds filed through the narrow aisles which separate the profusion of flowers shown in symmetrical arrangements. The features of the day were the exhibition of cut roses and the display of four dinner-table designs. The air was filled with the delicate fragrance of roses, and in the north hall there were hundreds of dozens of the most perfect flowers ever grown, gathered in vases.

A rare new species, of which E. G. Hill of Richmond, Ind., showed a large bunch, is the President Carnot. It is a dainty, fragile blossom, with delicate shadings of cameo pink, or flesh tint, on a groundwork of cream-colored, velvety petals. It is the new species that made a sensation in the Philadelphia Flower Show three weeks ago, and florists think it is too delicate a variety ever to become common.

The judges were not satisfied with the showing of table designs, and those shown were given very low markings. Even at that they attracted much attention. There will be more table designs every day while the show lasts.

The attendance was large yesterday, the rooms being crowded most of the afternoon and all the evening. The music, furnished by a string quintet, seemed more enchanting than usual with the beautiful surroundings and the fragrance of the floral display.

This afternoon at 4 o'clock the members of the West Park Board will visit the flower show in a body. Many of the plants from the parks under their control are among those on exhibition.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

THE PIANO THAT IS USED AND INDORSED by the world's greatest artists is the KIMBALL.

The only piano that secured the award for "SUPERLATIVE MERIT AND HIGHEST STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE" at the World's Fair is the KIMBALL.

The factory that produces more pianos and organs than any other factory in the world is the KIMBALL.

The only firm in Chicago who mark all pianos and organs in plain figures and sell strictly on the one-price system is the firm of
KIMBALL.

W. W. KIMBALL CO., Manufacturers,
Wabash-av., south of Jackson-st.

WELL, IT IS ALL OVER! NOW WE WILL settle down to business once more and see if we cannot interest you in something in the piano line. We hear that some of our competitors have raised their prices since election. This we have not done—something we are not going to do. ESTEY & CAMP prices will be the same old way down, hard pan prices they have always been. It is an established fact that you can get more for your money and easier terms here than with any other piano house in Chicago. We can sell you good second-hand square pianos from $25 to $100; good second-hand uprights from $100 to $250; new pianos from $250 up, fully guaranteed; mandolin and electric attachments. Tuning, repairing, moving at lowest rates. Rents—squares, $2 to $3; uprights, $4, $5, $6, $7, allowed if purchased. Give us a call and you will not have to look further for anything in the piano or organ line.

49, 51, 53 Jackson-st.

THREE WARDS ADDED.

OFFICIAL COUNT OF BALLOTS CAST NOV. 3 CONTINUES RAPIDLY.

Thirteenth, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth Given in Precinct Tables for President, Governor, State Treasurer, and State's-Attorney, and in Ward Form for Minor Officers—Some Country Town Figures Are Also Computed.

The official canvass of the votes cast in the City of Chicago at the election Nov. 3 was completed yesterday as far as the Sixteenth Ward, and several precincts of that ward were also canvassed before the adjournment of the Canvassing Board for the day. Tables showing the official count in the Thirteenth, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth Wards are appended.

The canvass of the votes cast in the country districts of Cook County was begun yesterday in the office of the County Clerk. The Board of Canvassers in this connection consists of County Clerk Knopf and Justices of the Peace Kersten and Severson. This board was in session yesterday from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m., and will keep the same hours every day until the canvass of the country vote is finished.

The vote of the Towns of Barrington, Bloom, Bremen, Calumet, and Elk Grove was canvassed yesterday. At this rate the canvass will continue at least six days and will be completed about the same time as the work of the City Canvassing Board.

In City Precincts.

Tables of the votes cast in the three city wards canvassed yesterday are as follows:

Appropriate Suggestion.

Chicago, Nov. 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—That Chicago, with its wonderful accomplishment in stamping out the vicious heresies which lately threatened the country, is fairly entitled to just consideration by the incoming administration is hardly to be questioned by any one.

Among those of Chicago who have faithfully devoted their labor and earnest sympathy in achieving this great victory not one has done more than our fellow-citizen, Washington Hesing. While differing with Mr. Hesing on the lesser important questions at issue between his party and the Republican party, which I always supported, many people believe the record of that gentleman in the administration of the affairs of the largest Postoffice in the United States has been so efficient and businesslike as to warrant the earnest hope that there will be no change in this office for the next four years at least.

Aside from his undoubted merit, the fact that Mr. Hesing has stood shoulder to shoulder with the victorious party and has contributed greatly to such results, surely entitles him to this reward, and I hope your valuable paper will wield its influence in this direction, provided it is agreeable to Mr. Hesing, which the best business interests of our great city trust it will be. SILAS M. MOORE IN ARMENIA'S AID.

Will Issue an Address to Americans After Having Removed His Kin from Scenes of Suffering.

Moved by the terrible scenes which he recently has witnessed, Silas M. Moore, who has just arrived from Constantinople, will issue an address to the public praying for some public action to relieve the destitution of the Armenians.

Mr. Moore started for Constantinople seven months ago in response to a letter from his son-in-law, C. Frank Gates, who is President of Euphrates College at Harpoot. The letter requested him to remove his daughter and her children from the awful scenes of tragedies that were being enacted every day all around them.

Mr. Moore met his daughter in Constantinople, where she had journeyed by carriage. Her terrible experiences had brought on a serious illness, and they were compelled to go to Switzerland in order that she might recover strength for the long journey home. Accompanied by Mrs. Gates and her two children, and by another married daughter, the party spent several weeks at Mr. Moore's home in Geneva.

CLARK DENIES LA MONTE STORY.

He Doesn't Believe Madden Is Obstructing the Civil Service Appropriation.

President Clark of the Civil Service Commission said yesterday the report published in a morning newspaper that Ald. Madden, in retaliation for the alleged efforts of Secretary Phelps to prevent the election of W. O. La Monte to the Legislature from the Fourth Ward, because he was a supporter of Madden, was obstructing the appropriation of the $10,000 asked by the commission, was entirely without foundation.

"In the first place," said Mr. Clark, "Mr. Phelps never has taken any steps to defeat Mr. La Monte or any one else. In the second place, Ald. Madden has had no opportunity to bring the matter before the Finance committee. He could not have been expected to do so during the election excitement, and ever since then he has been out of the city. I have no doubt the matter will receive his favorable attention at the next meeting of his committee."

MANY MORE MILLS OPEN.

FURTHER LIST OF THOSE RESUMING AND INCREASING WORKING TIME.

Total Number of Old Establishments Starting Up Since McKinley's Election Is Now 288, Giving Employment to 162,695 Men—Changes to Longer Hours Add to Wages of 20,100 Employes—Still Other Firms Preparing to Take Advantage of Prosperity.

Here is a further list of mills which have resumed business and others which have increased their working time within the last three days.

Taken together with the list published in THE TRIBUNE yesterday, it shows that 288 mills and factories have opened their doors and given employment to 162,695 men since McKinley's election.

It also shows that twenty-nine mills have increased their working time from a third to a half, thus adding greatly to the wages of 20,100 men.

There are many other manufactories also reported opened which have not been taken into consideration in these statements for the reason that no mention was made of the number of men given employment. There are many others preparing to resume work in the near future.

Here is the list of the additional mills opened:

SUPT. TUBBS REPLIES TO DR. HALL.

Representative of the Western Union Telegraph Company Resents Assertions of a Presbyterian Pastor.

Chicago, Nov. 10.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—THE TRIBUNE of Nov. 7 gives in full a political sermon by the Rev. Dr. Hall, preached some time previous in the Fourth Presbyterian Church of Chicago.

This sermon has been widely read and commented upon, but where he refers to the "monstrous abuse by the Western Union Telegraph company" of its messenger boys the facts do not bear out the reverend doctor's statements, and this is the more singular as, so far as I can learn, no attempt to secure truthful information was made. Of all places, statements from the pulpits should be at least as nearly correct as possible.

The Western Union Telegraph company employs a little over 400 messenger boys in Chicago, their ages running from 14 years upward, none under 14 being accepted, although the Illinois State law draws the line at under 13.

The reverend doctor also wastes more sympathy upon our messengers, "flung out upon the community unfit for its duty, careless even of their wrongs," than is necessary.

Does he know that, as a rule, these boys, while in our service, are largely the support of their parents, who have brought them to us and urged their employment as a necessity?

Does he know that when the majority of them cease to be messengers they are promoted either in our own service or that of other corporations or reputable firms?

Does he know that from telegraph ranks spring more Presidents and General Managers of telegraph companies, telephone companies, express companies, and our largest railroad systems than from any other class of labor?

Does he know that many of Chicago's most successful business-men, members of the Board of Trade, newspaper writers, etc., are graduates from telegraph ranks, or, as he claims, "flung out upon the community" by the Western Union Telegraph company? If not, all this information is within his reach.

The reverend doctor's little anecdote of being called to his door some years since by a "little fellow crying with cold and fright," that he gave him some coffee and paid his street car fare back, etc., would perhaps have had added strength if he had followed it up with the telegraph company employing him, with the public press, or the law, rather than have let it sleep so long. I agree with him that it would be monstrous to intrust an important telegram (and all telegrams are important) to a little boy of 7 or 8 years of age, and I had never heard of its being done previous to the publication of this sermon.

F. H. TUBBS.
Superintendent W. U. Telegraph company.

Report That a Coadjutor Is to

His Sympathy with the Archbishop
St. Paul the Cause.

WILL NOT BE REMOVED, HOWEV

New York, Nov. 12.—According to a priv dispatch received here Cardinal Gibbons, well as Archbishop Ireland, incurred the pleasure of Rome.
The Cardinal has always shown him a stanch friend of Archbishop Ireland an known to sympathize warmly with the vi of the St. Paul prelate. For this reaso is alleged, he has become a person ing at the Vatican.
How the Cardinal will be disciplined is definitely known, although it is beli that, being a Cardinal, he will not be remo from his see.
This much, however, is certain, that it been decided to impose upon the Cardin coadjutor decidedly of the conserva school. In this connection the names of rector of the New York Cathedral a well-known professor of the Catholic versity at Washington are mentioned.
St. Paul, Nov. 12.—Among those in Catholic affairs, the story of discipl spoken of as the concoction of those tion, and seek this means of getting a to whom they credit some of the influ that brought about that result.
